"ROMEO AND JULIET."

A Delightful Production, Never Before Excelled in This City.

"Romeo and Juliet," as rendered by the Bacon Company at the Frazer opera house Wednesday evening, was the best alone and made a little dress all by my-performance ever given in Pendleton. This statement is made with full knowl"You don't say so! How long did it-" edge that it will sound somewhat extravagant to persons who were not present. The balcony love scene in the third act was a piece of work which would have evoked storms of applause from the most critical audience in metropolitan Eastern cities. It was the gem around which were set numerous lesser gems of acting, each one of rare worth.

Miss Dalglish possesses the qualities of an ideal Juliet—a sweet, womanly manner, perfect enunciation, charming naivette, physical charms and an ele-ment of force which fills out the part and makes her really one of the best Juliets of the day:

warm admiration of his excellent work.

Together, Miss Dalglish and Mr. Lonergan present "Romeo and Juliet" in a manner which leaves even the most dyspeptic critic nothing but meeds of praise for his utterance.

Mercutio of Mr. E. J. Blunkall. What said of Mr. Lonergan as to quality of acting can be said of Mr. Blunkall. ly packed. A coarse clay cup was found

His dying scene was artistic in a high degree and in no situation was he lacking.

Miss Wiedman was a very successful nurse, and Tybalt was a finely carried part. Friar Lawrence by George Fullerton was equal to all requirements.

Frank Bacon, appearing only a couple of times as Peter, gave the audience an instinctive knowledge that he has the touch of a true comedian and would ex-touch of a true comedian and would excel in a part affording him opportunity to display his powers.

The strength of the Bacon company lies in the balance between the parts. Eliminating Lady Capulet and Count Paris, minor parts, and not material so far as acting is concerned, the company is finely selected, and the error is not committed by Mr. Bacon, so common in these days, of having one star and such weak support that the star shines with great relative brilliancy. This principle recognized by Mr. Bacon is certainly to be appreciated. He has a well balanced company and the average among his actors is very high.

"Ab, you are wrong there," said the girl with the eyeglasses. "Of course, it does discourage one to have the waif in whom she is interested pick her pocket and the destitute widow for whom she has been persecuting her friends criticise her taste in millinery; still, the

"Look here," said the girl in the fur ape, fiercely, "it is all very well for you who are engaged to a young clergyman to talk about the broad principles of humanity-I'm surprised that you don't use capitals in speaking of them-but for my part I'd like to see a little less public charity in some people and a lit-

"N-not very much. Oh, Elsie, if you will never, never tell as long as you live, I'll tell you all about it. You see, Harold's mother has somehow gotten an idea that I am a frivolous person, and last week I-well, I decided that I'd show her how practical I am."

"Well, and did you?" "It was this way-I was, of course,

UNCOOKED FOOD.

The Strange Fare of Three Hearty California Women.

Every Article of Food Consumed Is in the Natural State - Why the Natural State — Why This Odd Regime Is Preferred.

There are three charming women in Berkeley who constitute the exception necessary to prove the rule that man is a cooking animal. They regard cooking as barbarity. Their dainty palates rebel at the suggestion of any food that has had its crude nature modified by fire. To them the chef and all his works are anathema maranatha. They eat three hearty uncooked meals every day, and are as plump as partridges, as rosy as pippins and as happy as sandboys withal.

This gastronomical eccentric trio consists of Mrs. L. Beal and her two daughters, Alice and Mary Beal. The Beals are a cultured English family. Their wealth and intelligence preclude the idea that their extraordinary diet should have been adopted through either economy or imperfect investigation into matters of science. They moved from England to the South Sea islands, where Mr. Beal was a representative of her majesty's royal government. When Mr. Beal died they came to California, and have been living in a very pretty little place which nestles among the Berkeley hills.

It was during their residence in the islands of the South sea that the Beals acquired their taste for uncooked food. The Beals are in no sense simple caters of fruit. Their regimen includes all kinds of vegetables, cereals, fruit, berries-every thing, in fact, except meat. But nothing is permitted to approach the oven or the pot, the frying pan or the griddle.

The first article on the Beal breakfast menu is mush. That is, they call it mush, but no one would recognize it as the time-honored article. The raw material is taken from the original package and deposited in the dish of each breakfaster. To this is added milk to suit. The Beals do not confine themselves to one kind of mush, but devour by turns oats in different forms, corn meal and wheats, but always raw as the article comes from the grocery. To this are added fruits, nuts and one vegetable, all in a state of nature.

At luncheon uncooked bread takes the place of the uncooked mush. Wheat. corn or barley consely ground and mixed with milk is the substitute for bread upon the Beal table. Luncheon is completed much like the breakfast.

Dinner is completed by adding two vegetables to the luncheon menu and by varying the uncooked "bread." Any vegetable that may be in season is allowed-string beans, cabbage, turnips, carrots, artichokes or asparagus, as the case may be. Green corn eaten from the cob uncooked is said to be a great luxury, and raw green peas are described as delicious. When fresh fruits are out of season the dried fruits are accepted as a substitute. Canned fruits are never served, because they are cooked before canning. Among the dried fruits prunes find the greatest favor with the Beal family. Tea and coffee are never used, because the Beals regard the brewing thereof as a form of

"We live upon uncooked food simply "It is not a religious said Mrs. Beal. mania, but it is done because we are satisfied that it is proper from a scientific point of view. Our dietary habits are the result of our experience while living in the islands, and, now that we are in the heart of civilization, we do not see any reason to change it."

The simplicity that is exhibited in eating is carried through the remainder of the house. The furnishing of the place is very simple, but of the finest that can be purchased. The floors of the house are uncarpeted, but are of hardwood, highly polished, with rugs made from the pelts of wild animals found in the islands. The raiment of Mrs. Beal and her daughters is as simple and yet as expensive as the rest of their environments.—San Francisco Ex-
