TOO MUCH LAW.

The Tomahawk, usually correct in its views, takes a shy from its orbit this week on the subject of the Oregon senatorial muddle, and, with the Oregonian, asserts that the law is with Corbett, and that he is entitled to his seat. In defending its position the Tomahawk says:

In the light, however, that the United States senate recognizes and is governed by no law but of its own making, the question as to whether Mr. Corbett will be seated resolves itself into one of political expediency and not of equity to the state of Oregon or consistency on the part of that august body. The plea that there already exist precedents embracing the Oregon case is childish, because there has never before been a case of just such complications in the history of this country. There have been cases where the legislatures of states met, organized, passed laws and voted for a senator, but failed to agree, and in this failure to agree the United States senate found room for the excuse and denied the applicant at its doors his seat. We deem such ruling on the part of the senate as highly consistent, because when a legislature has met, organized, passed laws and voted for, but failed to elect a senator, the senate had no consistent right to seat any appointee, for such a failure bore the evidence upon its face that the delegated representatives of such a state did not desire to have a United States senator. But when a legislature fails to meet, never organizes, never notifies the chief executive, never passes a law, and consequently never votes for a senator, what reasons are there for permitting even a faint comparison between the two? Obviously none but such as may be evolved from political necessity.

The trouble seems to be that the papers dealing with this question are all hunting too much law, and avoiding too much common sense. They draw the distinction between a legislature that organizes and refuses to do its duty, and one that refuses to organize for the purpose of avoiding its duty. There is a difference it is true—the difference between tweedle-dum and tweedle-de. When the sticklers for law concede the first proposition, the second follows, as a matter of course. The legislature cannot do indirectly what it cannot do directly, and its refusal to organize for the purpose of preventing the election of a senator is as much its deliberate act as though it had organized and then refused to elect.

It is true technical objections can be made to this position, but we are not talking from the standpoint of legal hair splitters, we are talking sense. We are expressing the sentiments of the great mass of the people, who are honest; not of the few politicians who are "anything for the squirrel." Of the masses who are becoming overbacked from the wear of the political saddle, and who some day will buck the riders off and drag them to death.

There is an old legal proverb that "no one can take advantage of his own wrong," and while our solons are working on technical matters they might figure on how much benefit those who violated their pledges and their oaths of office are entitled to receive for doing so.

It may be possible, and it may be probable, that the American people will get such an overdose of law on their national stomach that it will operate as an emetic, and it will eject the whole lot. From having too much law we are apt to go to the other extreme and have too little. Hell and anarchy are already within reach of the political pot, and it will not require much effort to get both of them in it.

And still the balance of Europe continues to put the thumb screws on Greece, and prevent that little country tackling single-handed a power five times as strong as itself. The noble and warlike spirit of the Greeks has awakened admiration for them, and sympathy for their cause. Who knows but the whirligig of time has again spun to that point where another Philip and another Alexander may carry her arms across the Bosphorus and to the banks of the Indus?

NO SURRENDER.

The Pendleton Tribune, in discussing the Oregon senatorial question, among other things says:

The Mitchell Republicans and the anti Mitchell Republicans must unite and as Republicans vote for a Republican. Mitchell is now out of the contest, and while there may be those, including the Tribune, who may think, and with good reason, that Mitchell would have been elected had the house organized, all good Republicans, with the best interests of their party at heart, can well afford to forget and forgive, and take for granted that after all perhaps the elimination of Mitchellism from the politics of this state has been for the best. The Tribune is now willing to concede this in the interest of party fealty. But let us have a senator by some hook or crook.

The people want a senator without either hook or crook, but one elected as the constitution provides, not one appointed by the governor, or, to put it properly, not one selected by a combination of Populists, Democrats and Simon Republicans, the whole combination being a minority of the legislature.

Against Mr. Corbett personally we have nothing to say; against the manner of his getting the office we have always protested, always will protest. There can be no compromise with dishonor; no palliating of a deliberate violation of the constitution and the laws of the state; no surrender by the majority of the Republicans to a small minority; no treaty nor ratification of any treaty by the Republican party of the state with those who called the Populists and Democrats to their aid to thwart the will of the party. The interests of "party fealty" demand that party treachery be not rewarded. If this mean party war, so be it; if it mean a battle that may for a year or two retire the Republican party from power in this state, let it go at that. There is going to be no cowardly settlement in this matter. Each side realizes this; realizes that one or the other must go to the wall, and all appearance of peace is at the best but an armed neutrality.

"One of the greatest factors in the return of prosperity, which we are all anxiously waiting for," remarked a Chicago manufacturer recently, "will be the collapse of the steel pool. Carnegie and Rockefeller are reaching out for the markets of the world in the steel trade. This means an enormous production of steel and the employment of an army of American workmen at good wages, though the price of rails will be lower. Heretofore the greatest obstacle to European trade has been the cost of transportation. Carnegie and Rockefeller will float their steel down the Ohio and the Mississippi to New Orleans on barges, which are now being constructed. From that point the steel will be shipped as ballast in cotton-carrying steamers, which heretofore have used water ballast."

Senator Ingalls reported the Corbett-Fitzsimmons argument for the San Francisco Examiner. Slowly, but surely, Ingalls is redeeming himself. Though handicapped by being a member of the United States senate for eighteen years, Ingalls has risen superior to his evil associates and has blossomed out as a full-fledged reporter. Its a long step from the United States senate to the proud position of special representative of a great journal at a grand social function; but Ingalls was equal to the occasion, and gave a creditable write-up.

When readers understand that the newspapers that are making the hardest fight against "new journalism" are doing so for the purpose of beating their rivals and securing patronage for themselves, they can understand also the high morality which those same papers possess. As for us, we prefer the new journalism that gives the news to the dreary platitudes of the "unco good" sheets that hold up their hands in horror at news, and sell themselves to the enemies of the people. A bill to prohibit the wearing of tight on the stage has passed the second reading in the New York legislature, and bids fair to pass the house and become a law. We always knew those New York people were "racy," but really had no idea they had reached so acute a stage. And yet with this example of the legislature before them, some good people object to new journalism. Some wretch of an inventor has made a machine that will magnify "smells." Its possibilities for good are limited, but suppose the fellow should turn his old machine loose around a limburger cheese factory or a meeting of the Oregon legislature, or some other odoriferous assemblage. The very thought of the results of that invention makes one regret that noses are necessary. The county judges of most of the counties declare their determination not to pay over the state's proportion of taxes unless the legislature meet and make the regular appropriations. Of course the law provides for the paying over of the money at a stated time, but it must be remembered it also provides that the legislature shall meet at a certain time. Mark Hanna is already paying the penalty of greatness. It is said that a combination has been formed in Ohio for electing a legislature that will not return him to the senate, the working men and labor unions being behind the movement. FOR THE HOUSEHOLD.

Hints of Value to the Cook and House-keeper.

When loaves of bread are baked in too hot an oven and the outside crust gets too brown do not attempt to cut it off, but as soon as the bread is cold rub it over with a coarse tin grater and remove all the dark brown crust. Always remember that one of the best appetizers is pleasant conversation. It is said that if each of the large peppers is rolled in paper and put in a dark, cold place it will keep green and may be used for a vegetable until midwinter. When baking a custard pudding or pie, as soon as the custard becomes solid remove the dish from the oven, for too long cooking will make a custard watery. A delicious sauce is made from grated horseradish root mixed with lemon juice, a little salt, and a suspicion of white sugar. Served with cold meats, it makes them much more inviting and palatable. This sauce will retain its flavor for some time if kept well covered when not being used. Made with the juice of a lemon, the root does not discolor so quickly as when made in the old way with vinegar. One of the best and quickest ways of cleaning the window panes in a stove is with vinegar and water. Dip a soft cloth in the vinegar and water, and quickly rub the windows over, going well into the corners. The windows will remain clean for a long time.—N. Y. Sun.

Where Milk is Scarce. Fresh milk is an almost unknown luxury in South African towns, and for a large part of the year in the country also. "Condensed cow" is the form in which milk is procurable at hotels and in private houses.—Chicago Tribune.

Selecting a Jury. This is from a farcical interlude in one scene now running continuously in New York city: Counsel for Defense—Now, sir, if you were taken upon this jury without further assumption of your general disability to serve in an unbiased manner and without due regard to the requisites necessary to enable you to discriminate between a presumption of the guilt of the accused or otherwise despite the charge of the court and the complicity of the police if proved according to the precedents established in all such cases heretofore recorded and supposing that the circumstantial proof was clearly stronger than the unwritten facts would unsupported give credence to it summarily applied in accordance with established legal formula what would you do? Candidate for Jury (visibly affected)—I don't know, sir. "Excused."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

LAND OF SUNSET SHORES

best the market affords, and the marvel of the whole is, that the entire cost of a round trip, including fare, meals and scenery, is actually less than that of many second-class hotels for the same time. The board of directors consists of seven business men of The Dalles, thus securing for the time, and it is hoped for all time, a continuance of the generous policy that has made the Regulator Line the pride and boast of a most important section of the Inland Empire. These are: Hugh Glenn, president; J. T. Peters, vice-president; O. Kinerly, secretary; Robt. Mays, J. P. McInerney, S. L. Brooks, M. T. Nolan. The boats of the Regulator Line furnish first-class through freight and passenger service daily between Portland and The Dalles. Information in regard to freight and passenger rates may be had by applying to W. C. Allaway, General Agent, The Dalles, Oregon.

BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONAL PEOPLE BRIEFLY MENTIONED. A Mammoth Concern. One of the most complete establishments in Oregon is that owned by A. M. Williams & Co. and personally managed by Mr. E. M. Williams. The premises occupied is a spacious two-story brick building covering in all 100x100 feet, the first floor of the main building (80x100) is especially well arranged and filled to its utmost capacity with the best selections from Eastern and foreign markets of dry goods, notions, ladies furnishings, clocks and spring waps of all late designs. A feature of the main floor is a beautifully furnished room set apart for ladies who are "shopping" to rest, arrange their toilet, enjoy a tete-tete with friends, etc. The second floor contains an immense stock of clothing, gent's furnishings, hats, caps and house furnishings. His shoe department is an establishment in itself, embracing all the latest styles of men's, ladies' and children's shoes. Mr. Williams employs fifteen clerks the year round, every one of which is courteous and congenial and ever ready to please. Mr. Williams superintends the entire store and by his enterprise and ambition has placed his business in the very front rank of successful business houses. His store is a great credit to the town, and would do justice to a much larger city. All people from outside the city will find every convenience at this emporium for a full day's shopping, and they as well as townsmen can receive no better attention, no better goods, nor no cheaper prices than at this mammoth concern.

Hon. Alfred S. Bennett. The subject of this biographical sketch has led an active life, both as a public man and a private individual. Born in Dubuque county, Iowa, in 1854, coming to Oregon at a very early age, with a passion for mastering everything that promised emolument or honor, he began the practice of law in 1880 and was appointed circuit judge of the fifth judicial district in 1882, during which time he gave universal satisfaction. His offices in the Schanno building contain one of the largest and most complete libraries in the Northwest. The judge, as he is still called, is the personification of integrity, and as a private citizen he is honored and respected by all.

A Model Store. With the opening of his new clothing store John C. Hertz has established one of the finest emporiums in the city of the Northwest. On his counters you will find a beautiful line of men's clothing at prices never before heard of in The Dalles, and while they are not expensive in price yet the trimming and workmanship are good. On the left you will find a large and well selected line of furnishing goods, which can safely be guaranteed to give entire satisfaction. This line comprises such goods as Wilson Bros.' underwear and neckwear, Monarch, Summit and Standard shirts, E. & W. collars and cuffs, etc. To the right the shelves are filled with the latest line of hats and caps ever shown in The Dalles. And last but not least, in the rear is a beautiful little shoe department in which is kept the best leather which money can buy, from $1.50 to $6.00, and taken altogether these lines make a most complete clothing store, and Mr. Hertz may feel justly proud to be the proprietor of it. We would therefore advise the public to examine his stock, as he will be able to save you some money. Making a specialty of men's goods and giving his entire attention to it enables him to get the right goods at the right prices. Do not fail to call on him.

Oregon Bakery and Confectionery. The above named bakery and confectionery is owned by Mr. A. Keller, who carries a fine line of French cream candies, nuts, fruits, etc., also a large selection of fancy cakes, rolls, bread, etc. In connection he has a large beautiful soda fountain that during the season is supplied with pure syrups and natural fruits. Anything in this line can be found at the Oregon bakery and confectionery. Elite Tonsorial Parlors. Another establishment worthy of notice is the above barber shop, owned and conducted by Mr. H. D. Parkins. This is a very neat shop, with all modern appliances, bath, etc. Mr. Parkins has made many friends and hosts of patrons by doing good work and receiving every one in a congenial manner.

N. Harris. The Dalles has several large first-class general merchandise stores, among the leaders of which is that of Mr. N. Harris, dealer in dry goods, clothing, boots, shoes, hats, caps, gent's furnishings, etc. He buys direct from the eastern manufacturers and for cash thereby enabling him to place his goods at the very lowest figure. His store is located at the corner of Second and Court streets, and is a large double store, with nice fixtures and modern improvements.

Midway Saloon. One of the neatest sample rooms in The Dalles is that known as the "Midway Saloon," owned and managed by Messrs. W. I. Marders and Charles F. Michelbach, conducted on broad principles and ever ready to please. Their wines, liquors and cigars are the very best the market affords. They have the best known whiskies, E. C. Berry and Old Taylor. The saloon is very attractive, being finished in cherry, with fixtures of the same pretty wood. They have club rooms in connection, where one wishing to while away a pleasant hour can always find ample accommodation. They are both enterprising young men, formerly in business in the Sound country. The rooms are commodious and orderly, and they are having a large patronage, owing to their honest dealings and congenial ways. They cater to the transient trade and make a specialty of fine fancy drinks for all who wish them. Any one calling at this resort will not consider the time lost or mispent. This saloon is located at No. 86 Second street, and the telephone number is 206.

New York Cash Store. That the people appreciate enterprise and perseverance is shown by the success of one of our principal firms, known as the New York Cash Store. They have been closely identified with the business interests of this city for some time, and have become one of the most prominent firms of Wasco county. They have always been foremost in the advancement of any and all propositions that would tend to the benefit and advantage of The Dalles. The firm is Messrs. A. C. Giger & Co., proprietors, and are located at 138 to 142 Second street. The stock carried includes clothing, hats, caps, ladies' and gent's furnishings, notions, boots, shoes, etc., etc., and Giger & Co., by giving their entire attention to the business, buying direct from the factories and watching the latest styles, they are in a position to show a larger assortment of goods and give better satisfaction than can be found elsewhere in this section.

I. C. Nickelsen. A neat and attractive store of The Dalles is that of Mr. I. C. Nickelsen, jewelry and silversmith of all kinds, organs and pianos, sheet music, guitars, violins, ornaments and toys, also sporting goods of all kinds, and a fine line of stationery, books and fancy goods. Mr. Nickelsen has been in business here for twenty-five years and by his energy and thrift has helped to make The Dalles the successful and enterprising city that it is today.

California Meat Market. A neat market is that known as the California Meat Market at No. 80 Second street, owned and conducted by Messrs. Wood Bros. They carry both fresh and cured meats, also fish and game in season. Their market is always neat and clean, and anyone patronizing this market are assured of the best of the season. Their telephone number is "76." They also buy and sell all kinds of live stock.

The Baldwin Restaurant. A first-class eating house is the one on First street owned by Mr. Al. Bettingen and known as the "Baldwin Restaurant." Their table consists of every delicacy of the season, and the service of this restaurant is unsurpassed. It is noted for its cleanliness, and anyone wishing a first-class meal and prompt attention will receive both at this well known resort.

Blakeley & Houghton. The drug house owned and managed by Messrs. Blakeley & Houghton is one of the best equipped retail drug stores in the city. The premises occupied are most handsomely appointed, the fixtures all being tastefully arranged. The stock carried includes besides a full line of drugs and druggists' sundries, stationery, toilet articles, etc. They are the proprietors of Wood's sarsaparilla, Wood's penetrating liniment, Peerless dentifrice, Climax squirrel poison and Peerless eau de quinine. They also do an wholesale business, and are located at 175 Second street.

L. Jordan & Co. This successful establishment, which is located very centrally convenient to all shoppers, carries a complete stock of fancy and staple groceries, besides a nice line of crockery, glassware, plateware, toys, notions, fancy goods, etc. Mr. Jordan is an enterprising man and a thorough business merchant, always keeping in stock what the people want and putting his prices so as to reach the pocket of all. Give him a call and be convinced.

J. H. Cross. This gentleman is the proprietor of a grain and feed establishment, handling hay, grain, feed and all kinds of produce, poultry, eggs, etc. He also has in stock seeds of all kinds and has the largest stock in Wasco county. He pays cash for everything, and as a citizen as well as a business man, enjoys the reputation of being one of the most enterprising and successful merchants of Wasco county.

Mrs. M. E. Briggs. The above named lady is one of the leading milliners of The Dalles. In connection with a stock of all the latest designs in millinery she keeps on hand a full line of infants' furnishings goods and children's cloaks. Her place of business is located at No. 112 Second street, and her telephone number is 245 and 101.

Harry C. Liebe. Another enterprise worthy of notice is the attractive jewelry store of Mr. Harry C. Liebe. His place of business is located in the Voght block, and the stock carried includes everything to be found in a first-class jewelry store. He always has in stock all the latest designs in jewel novelties, watches, clocks, silverware, etc. Mr. Liebe is a practical watchmaker and jeweler and employs none but competent help. He guarantees all the work he turns out, and solicits your patronage, and we safely guarantee satisfaction to all his patrons.

Al. Bettingen. A first-class sample room is that owned by Mr. Al. Bettingen. His wines and liquors are of the very best, and his brands of cigars are both domestic and imported. His guests are always treated with great courtesy, and any one "seeing the town" can find no more enjoyable resort than that of Al. Bettingen.

Columbia Hotel. One of the leading hotels of The Dalles is the Columbia, conducted by J. M. Toomey. It is the commercial house of the city and is supplied with all modern conveniences. The office, dining rooms and parlors are spacious and commodious, and the sleeping rooms are neat and clean. Any one stopping at this house will receive the best of attention in all respects.

H. C. Nielsen. Among the many merchants of this city is Mr. H. C. Nielsen, clothier and tailor. He is located at the corner of Second and Washington streets, and the stock carried consists of everything in the clothing and gent's furnishing goods, also boots, shoes, etc. We take great pleasure in recommending this store for goods, low prices and courteous treatment.

Mrs. A. Schooling. A first-class millinery establishment is that of Mrs. A. Schooling, at No. 114 2d street. Her stock consists of all the latest shades and shapes, and she expects to exhibit some beautiful and fashionable designs at her spring opening. She employs a first-class trimmer and her prices are such as to suit the times.

Beardley & McCoy. A neat barber shop is that of Beardley & McCoy. They have four chairs and bath in connection. Any one wishing a first-class shave and exhilarating bath can be supplied at the O. K. baths.

Farley & Frank. Another of our representative business firms is Farley & Frank, manufacturers of and dealers in harness, saddlery, carriage trimming, California trees, tents, wagon covers, etc. They make a specialty of repairing, attending to it very promptly. This firm takes an active part in anything that tends to further the advance of their city, and we predict for them a continuance of the success they are now enjoying. Their prices are very reasonable, and we can say with pleasure that it is one of the best places to trade in the city.

J. M. Filloon. Mr. Filloon came to The Dalles in 1887 and engaged in the agricultural implement business with his brother, and conducted one of the largest concerns in Eastern Oregon under the name of Filloon Bros., and continued in business under that name until the great fire of 1891, after which the firm dissolved partnership, Geo. W. Filloon going on the road as general agent for the Pacific States for Cummings' Harvester Co., of Pekin, Ill., and J. M. Filloon going into business for himself, in which he is still proprietor.

Michael, Surad & Perlman. The gentlemen whose names grace this article are dealers in new and second-hand goods, including furniture, stoves, carpet, bedding, crockery, glassware, tinware, hardware, etc. They buy and sell all kinds of household goods, and no matter what you want nor what price you want to pay, you are sure to be accommodated at Messrs. Michael, Surad & Perlman's.

The Pacific Corset Co. An establishment that The Dalles can well be proud of is the Pacific Corset Co., manufacturers of hand corset health corsets. Their leader is called the "Princess," and we hear on all sides the entire satisfaction it produces among the people who have tried them. They are worn almost exclusively by theatrical people and are very easy for both dress and every day use. They are very handsome, made up in English satteen, in black, old gold, white or drab. Prompt attention is given to mail orders, and corsets are made to measure and sent by mail for $2.75. Mr. D. L. French, the efficient manager, is a pleasant, congenial man to do business with, and guarantees to give satisfaction to all.

Christman Brothers. A well patronized market is that of Messrs. Christman Bros., located corner Third and Court streets. Messrs. Levi and Frank Christman rank among the first butchers of the town, having been in business here for over eight years. They handle everything in salt, fresh and cured meats, having always in stock choice beef, mutton, pork, hams, bacon, corned beef, etc. They deliver goods to any part of the city free of charge, and fully deserve all the patronage they are enjoying.

The Germania. The Dalles has several first-class sample rooms, but none excel "The Germania," owned and managed by Mr. Otto Birgfeld, 94 Second street. Mr. Birgfeld came from Portland about fifteen months ago, entering into the saloon business at this place, and his stock of wines, liquors and cigars are of the choicest the market affords. He has the agency of the celebrated Gamberina beer, which is a great favorite in this city both for saloon and family trade, and is without doubt as pure a beer as is manufactured. The fixtures of this favorably-known resort are very modern, with well appointed club rooms in connection. Mr. Birgfeld, since his advent here, has made many warm and true friends, who predict for him a brilliant future.

Diamond Roller Mills. An ornament to Wasco county is the above mentioned mills. Mr. A. H. Curtis, proprietor of the mills, is a very enterprising citizen, and as such has made his mill the first-class in every respect. He is a manufacturer and dealer in roller flour, graham flour, self rising flour, germ meal, and all kinds of mill feed. The capacity of these mills is one hundred barrels per day. They are fitted up with every modern compliance, and the employees are all experienced men. His terms are strictly cash, and all who patronize him are guaranteed satisfaction.

W. A. Kirby. Among the many grocery houses of The Dalles, W. A. Kirby's ranks with the leaders. His stock consists of a complete line of staple and fancy groceries, canned goods of every description, and has always on hand poultry and fish. Mr. Kirby makes a specialty of fine teas and coffees, and his store is noted for carrying such. It is located at No. 83 Third street, and while his present patronage is all that could be hoped for, yet he solicits a call from you, knowing he can satisfy any and all.

Maier & Benton. One of the most enterprising hardware houses is that of Maier & Benton, dealers in heavy and shell hardware and groceries. They are agents for the Cleveland bicycles, Boynton and Royal furnaces, Garland stoves and ranges, and several other equally as well known hardware articles. Their place of business is at No. 133 Second street, where they are always pleased to meet their patrons.

W. H. Jones. The only exclusive tobacco house in The Dalles is the one owned by W. H. Jones. He deals in all grades of cigars and tobaccos and carries smokers' arti-
