> The river has fallen about sixteen inches since yesterday morning, but is again almost at a standstill, with the present warm weather indicating another rise. Reports from up the country show that there is plenty of snow to make a very high water, should the weather remain warm for a few weeks. At Baker City, although the floods have been unprecedented, there is a report that another warm spell would cause pate extra high water here, though it may come up to the 50-foot mark.
