THE DALLES, OREGON

PERSONAL MENTION.

Saturday's Daily. Mrs. J. A. Henderson came up from White Salmon last night, returning this morning.

Attorney W. H. Holmes of Salem, is in the city looking after some legal matters.

Joe Howard arrived in the city last night from Prineville. He drove down 150 head of beef cattle, which were last night at Eight-Mile. He came in very slowly, as the grass along the road was good, and the cattle arrived in fine shape.

Monday's Daily. Mr. H. M. Beall spent yesterday with his family in Portland.

Messrs. W. H. Moody and R. H. Lonsdale returned from Portland last night.

Mrs. G. C. Blakeley and Miss Minnie Mitchell came up from Portland last night's train.

Rev. Frank Spaulding, who has been engaged in missionary work in Brazil, is again home, arriving Saturday night.

John Todd came in from Prineville last night, bringing the Howard cattle. John is an old timer, whom everybody knows and likes.

Tuesday's Daily. Al Everding was a passenger for Portland this morning.

Dr. Siddall left this morning for Portland. He will be home Thursday.

Judge Bradshaw goes to Crook county Monday to hold the regular May term of court. The docket is light.

To Sheepmen.

Prineville Review.

EDITOR REVIEW:—I am much gratified to note the effect on the leading paper of this state that our united work has accomplished in showing the injustice of the proposed exclusion of sheep from ranging in the Cascade mountains. Also that our petitions and letters laid before Secretary Bliss have elicited from him favorable comment. I would now take this opportunity to recommend to all who feel so disposed to take his stock into the Cascade mountains to summer, if he feels so disposed, for these reasons:

First—It has been decided by the United States court that no other cause of action will lie other than a cause for damages. Public opinion has now been so educated that it will be difficult to secure a jury that would assess any damages whatever unless it should appear to have occurred through the carelessness of the sheepmen in letting fires spread through their negligence in the mountains. In the second place I think there will be legislation soon that will enable us to know just where we can take our stock. The fact is, I think the reservation will be cut down and that permits to use it for pasturage will be granted under restrictions of a protective nature.

In fact, I believe if there is a single arrest for trespassing upon the reserve, it will only hasten a final result in our favor, and for the matter of costs to the party arrested, we could easily adjust that by all contributing who have a natural interest in the final ending of the controversy.

I think the Hon. George W. Barnes will join me in the recommendation I have made. Respectfully yours, WM. C. WILLS.

Murdered at La Grande.

The chancellor commander, and members of Lemon Lodge, No. 4, K. of P., received telegraphic advices Sunday that Harry Sidell had been shot and killed Sunday at La Grande in an altercation with one Bartemus. Sidell was a member of Damon Lodge, and formerly ran into Pendleton as fireman on the engine of Harry St. Cyr.

Today, particulars were received from La Grande regarding the affair. Sidell had rented some land from Bartemus, who reserved a portion for his own use as a garden spot. Sunday the two men became involved in an altercation regarding the land and the arrangements for its handling. During the dispute, the two men allowed their anger to rise, and, in the melee, Sidell chased Bartemus into the latter's house.

Sidell then proceeded to break down the fence and commenced plowing the land. Bartemus grasped his Winchester rifle, rushed out of doors and shot Sidell, who died from the wound.

Bartemus was placed under arrest. Sidell being a member of Damon lodge here in Pendleton, the chancellor commander telegraphed for the body to be buried at the expense of the lodge. He was well known here and leaves a small family.—East Oregonian.

THE POLITE ITALIANS.

Florence, the City of Well-Mannered Citizens.

If I wished to teach an awkward child, youth or girl good manners by example, I should send him or her to Florence, says a writer. There may be ill-mannered persons there, but I never saw one. Poor people behave with the suave dignity which used in England to stamp the lady or gentleman. Most persons are brainy, but cleverness is not eager to shine. It is very subdued and more oily than corrosive. The charm of Florence steals on one like the wit of its clever inhabitants. The senses are soothed in all directions by harmonious manners and objects. Architects understand chiaroscuro not less than the great painters and sculptors. One never wearies of the streets and public buildings; their aspects constantly and strongly vary, according to the course of the sun. Lights and shades at ten in the forenoon are wholly different from what they will be at four in the afternoon. The Florentine women have interesting, though not beautiful, faces. But one has only to walk into the market to see country girls who would have done for models of Raphael's Virgin-mothers. One is struck in the galleries with the nice judgment with which the pictures are hung. What more lofty in sentiment than the tomb of Lorenzo de Medici? Loftiness is an attribute of Florence architecture, palatial or domestic. The doors of private houses might pass in England for portals. One feels them to be great facts in their way.

Talking of harmonious things reminds me of the Boboli Gardens. Is there a spot in England, the land of stately and lovely seats, that at all approaches them? In situation, and tranquil, generous loveliness, I can only think of one—the duke of Northumberland's terraced gardens at his place in Surrey. The Boboli Eden, where the prince and princess of Naples still court seclusion, has the advantage over the Surrey paradise of being under a revealing sky. Every shade of greenery, every floral hue is well brought out. One sees the faultless texture of statues and fountains mellowed by time. In so strong a light a well-ordered design is required, and one has it. The marbles are the climax. They are to the horticultural beauties as brilliant to the lace and satin of a fine woman's dress.

Florence is not what it was in the grand ducal days. Still, it retains the air of a capital with a long and illustrious history. The ladies' dresses are only provincial when measured by the Paris standard, to which Italian women above the peasant class generally submit—more the pity Paris fashions, only suit French women, unless applied by French hairdressers and femmes de chambre. An English or a German face under a Paris hat or bonnet is at a dreadful disadvantage, if the hair has not been first dressed by a French artiste capillaire. He places the hat, through the medium of the hair, in harmonious relation with the face. I fancy these French coiffeurs are not much employed by Italian ladies.—London Truth.

FUR IN COLD STORAGE.

Summer Attacks of Moths Prevented by Refrigeration.

In an article read before the National Warehousemen's association at Boston lately by Prof. Howard, a government entomologist, the subject of the preservation of furs by cold storage was treated, and public attention was called to this, one of the latest novel uses of artificial refrigeration. In a cold storage room the temperature can be raised or lowered at will. In some of the rooms, for instance, where it is desired to keep poultry for any length of time, the temperature is kept at the zero point. With the improved systems, the rooms are free from dampness, and for this reason can be utilized for an almost unlimited number of purposes. In the case of furs, the temperature of the room, if kept at 30 degrees, would make it impossible for any of the insects which get into and destroy this kind of goods, to live. Every housewife knows that moths do not breed in the winter-time, and camphor balls and insect-destroying powders are made use of only in the summer months.

Already there is one large warehouse in New York city where furs are sent to be stored through the summer. It is a most satisfactory method, for the furs are kept free from the odor of camphor and other drugs and powders, the smell of which is disagreeable to many persons. Woolens and all other lines of goods which are subject to destruction by insects can be preserved in this way. Chocolate candy manufacturers use a cold storage room in which their candies are kept, and the candies are made in a room so cool that melting cannot retard the process of manufacture. In this way the output of the candy plant is largely increased. Soap factories, refineries, chemical works and a large line of other factories are coming to use the cold storage room.—N. Y. Tribune.

MAKE GOOD SERVANTS.

The Japanese Are Apt and Efficient Help.

They Are Careful and Economical, and Do Not Want to Be Told What They Are to Do, But Go to Work.

"How do the Japanese compare with the Chinese as servants?" a gentleman asked of a life-long friend who had had experience with help of both nationalities. "There is no comparison," was the reply. "The Chinese are efficient, but they are awfully set in their ways. If you give a Chinaman an order to-day he will do that very same thing the next day, and every other day, no matter how absurd it may be, unless expressly told not to do so. A Japanese will use his own judgment and save you a lot of bother. The Japanese adapt themselves to our customs very quickly and they are naturally courteous and obliging. They don't mind work, either. I have a friend whose one servant is a Japanese girl, and she does the work of the entire house for less wages than a German or Swede would and just as thoroughly.

"What delights me with the Japanese is that they are so careful and economical," this lady continued. "Nothing is ever wasted in the kitchen since Bohma was installed, and my butcher bills are lessened considerably. Then she is always scrubbing up the tables and dressers, and I believe she puts on clean clothing every day. I always see her washing hanging out late in the afternoon."

Inquiry discovers that there are a great many Japanese in the big cities of the union, and that every ship that comes brings a fresh relay of 20 or 30. A Japanese mission established in Brooklyn finds homes for any number of these adventurers. As the newcomers, no matter what their proficiency or social standing may be, are totally unacquainted with localities, the rate of wages, etc., they gladly accept the domestic service which gives them shelter and food for present needs. The managers report that those supplied with places invariably give satisfaction. A number of Japanese girls and women who came over to the world's fair were stranded in the country and have had to support themselves as best they could. All these have taken refuge in housework or have been engaged as sewing maids. They came originally to dance or sing or form a part of a Japanese booth or domestic "interior." Their aim, after being dismissed, was to make money enough to return home, but, as is not unusual, they see the advantage of life in America and have decided to live here.

Of late years many business men have lived for months or years in Japan, having their families in residences. Their Japanese servants have accompanied them to America and neighbors of these returning absentees, noting the efficiency of their eastern domestics, have gotten them to bring out relatives or friends to serve in a like capacity in their households; thus the infection spreads. The Japanese consul in New York has sometimes as many as 25 applications in a single day for servants.

"I want a cook and a butler. I hear the Japanese are so thoroughly reliable," says a servant-hunting housekeeper. "You must excuse my troubling you," she adds, as it dawns on her that the consul does not necessarily keep an employment agency.

"We sometimes find places for our countrymen newly-landed," says the consul, and then he turns her over to his secretary, who in turn, directs her to an uptown flat where a Columbia college student keeps an impromptu intelligence bureau for fellows of his race.

These college aspirants think well of the $20 or $30 a month which such positions give them. They work in these various callings for a year or two until they accumulate a little money and then they finish their college course or set up business for themselves. One of the partners in a big Broadway store devoted entirely to Japanese wares was two years ago a trusted "man of all work" in a well-known American family. He saved $1,500 and won the lasting respect and friendship of his employers, who were loath to lose him.—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

Bond Issue of $20,000.

School district No. 12, of Wasco county, Oregon (being the district in which Dalles City is located) will issue twenty coupon bonds of the par value of one thousand dollars each, bearing interest at the rate of six per cent per annum, interest payable semi-annually; said bonds being receivable at the pleasure of said district after ten years from their date, but due and payable absolutely twenty years from date. Principal and interest payable at the office of the treasurer of Wasco County, Or., or at such place as may be designated in the city and state of New York, at the option of the purchaser. The board of directors of said district are lawfully authorized to issue said bonds in accordance with the provisions of an act of the Legislative Assembly of the State of Oregon, filed in the office of the Secretary of State Feb. 22, 1893, and providing, among other things, for the issuing of bonds by school districts.

In compliance with the terms of said act, I, as Treasurer of said county, will receive sealed bids for said bonds at my office, in Dalles City aforesaid, until 1 o'clock p. m. on the 15th day of May, 1897. All bids must be accompanied by a certified check of five per cent of the amount of bonds for which the bid is made. No bids for less than par will be considered. The buyer to furnish blank bonds to be executed by the district. The right to reject any and all bids is reserved. Dated at Dalles City, Wasco County, Oregon, this 22nd day of March, 1897. C. L. PHILLIPS, Treasurer of Wasco County, Or.
