A LIVE PROTEUS.

Rare Reptile Found on an Inundated Farm in Ohio.

A strange reptile was found last week on George Worchester's farm, near Middleton, O. It puzzled every one for a long time, till the Cincinnati Enquirer discovered that it was a genuine proteus.

During the recent floods a portion of the farm was inundated, and after the waters receded whole districts of muddy sediment were exposed. It was in this mud that Worcester discovered the reptile, and, capturing it, placed it on exhibition in his stable on Main street, in this city, where it has attracted the attention of hundreds of curious people all day long.

To those who are acquainted with the history of this species of reptile it is unnecessary to state that its rarity makes it a curious sight. It is about one foot long, with an elongated and cylindrical body. The tail is short, broad and compressed laterally. The strangest feature of the reptile is its lungs, which are on the outside of its body, and so transparent that the blood can be seen coursing through them. It has three sets of lungs, or rather three bronchial tubes, all of which are persistent during life. Its skin is slimy. To the body are attached four weak legs. On each of the anterior are three toes, while the posterior have four toes. The body is about half an inch in diameter, of April, 1897. and of a pale flesh color, while the bronchial tufts, or lungs, are of a bright crimson. The teeth in both jaws and on the palate are small and sharp. The head is triangular and the snout obtuse The eyes are very small and without Strange Custom of the Mountain

The breathing of this reptile is essentially aquatic, so far as the outside lungs are concerned, though it has internal lungs, and rises to the top of the water when these are filled with air. It can live but a short time out of the water.

Whenever the water in which it lives soft-shelled mollusks.

ing its life indefinitely.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Care is taken internally, acting directly ipon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the ioun-dation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonisis. Address: F. J. Mrs. A. Inveen, residing at 720 Henry St., Alton, Ill., suffered with sciatic rheumatism for over eight months. #### MARRY IN SECRET.

People of the South.

Weddings Are Conducted Without Any Ceremony and There Are No Feastings or Congratulations.

There are few places and few grades gets low it burnes itself in the mad, and of life, in either the rural or the urban lives on aquatic worms and insects and world, where the word "wedding" is not a synonym for joy and festivity. Only the cynic or the misanthrope protests It is found only in the subterranean against the wedding celebration. We waters of certain caves of Europe, not- wear out most customs, but the wedably those of Carinthia and Tyrol, and ding feast remains. While very likely especially in the Adelsburg cavern, in | not the only place in the world, the only Carniola. Only two others were ever place in my experience where there is known to be found in this country. By any general concealment of proposed keeping the reptile in water and mud, Mr. Worcester may succeed in extend-ing its life indefinitely. ing regular company" with "Lize." Suddenly the town will be apprised of the fact that "Zeb and Lize done got married last night." This constitutes what might be called an anticipated

Sometimes in the large settlements due notice will be given and the wed-ding take place in the little church or in the building used in common for all public purposes-religious services, school, political gatherings and itinerent shows. That practice is, however, generally confined to the elite of the community. In one place in my experience the popular resort for the performance of the ceremony was the broad singer who was here with the Carnita platform in the rear of a local sawmill. I could discover no ground for the popularity of the spot. Sometimes a few intimate friends would be invited to atetud. Sometimes none was observer save the causal passer-by. More frequently there were no witnesses save the sun above the lumber-piles around. Concerning that spot a local magistrate tells an amusing story. A certain man had been unfortunate in the longevity of his selections, had been twice married and twice bereaved. He called upon the magistrate to officiate at a third ceremony. As the happy pair took their places before him, upon the mill platform, to pledge their faith and love, he said to the groom: "Move a little further over this way, John. Toe up to that line. That is where you've always stood before." And there was no proceeding until John had "toep up."

A man who was doing some work for me came to me one day at noon and asked permission to be absent until 'quartering time," 3:30 o'clock. He said nothing to me or to his associates of his purpose. He returned promptly on time, to announce, in a casual and indifferent manner, that during his absence he had been married and, with the little furniture possessed by the pair, had settled in a cabin of his own. Again and again have I seen the same plan followed in other cases.

The ground for so general observance of secrecy Feould not discover. It holds with both the intention of marriage and the precise time of the ceremony. I think it is due in considerable measure to fear of that harrowing performance known as the charivari-in the idiom, "shivaree." To those unfamiliar with that entertainment I can only describe it as a most excruciating pandomonium, effected by combinations of pots and The 25 and 50 cent sizes for sale by and boys for miles around. I have been the unfortunate auditor of one or two such performances, and if I knew that one were to take place around the walls of my dwelling if I married I should choose to "live a bachelor." I blame no man for retaining his secret to avoid the experience. The poorer classes, with whom the concealment is a general practice, have no money to spend for the entertainment of their friends. Not infrequently, there is no money for even a new gown for the bride. The affair then becomes a simple matter of mutual agreement; the business is dispatched without fuss or features and the journey to paradise is taken by the most direct route.-N. Y. Post.

Nansen's Predictions.

Nearly everything Nansen predicted tour miles of Dalles City, with one span about his journey has come true. He said he expected to cross the unknown polr area, and he has done it. He foretold exactly the general direction in which his ship would drift while fast in the ice, but it is not certain that he correctly assigned the cause of this drift. * * * Nansen invented the model of the Fram, making her hull round and slippery like an eel, with no corners or sharp edges for the ice to seize upon. She is the strongest vessel ever used in Arctic exploration, asserts McClure's Magazine. He said that press ure would simply lift her on the ice, and ing unpaid on the roll will be declared so her bottom, near the keel, was made delinquent, and thereafter the sheriff almost flat, in order that she might not capsize while on the ice surface, and her serew and rudder were also ingenionsly protected. The many experts who said her design would not save the Fram from instant destruction were mistaken, for she met these resistless ice pressures and they merely lifted her out of her cradic and she rested safely on the surface. Nansen said that, owing to the probable predominance of water in the far north, he expected to find there higher temperatures than along the north coast of Asia. This remarkable prediction has been fulfilled. The lowest temperature observed on the Fram was 611% degrees Fahrenheit, while further south, in the Kara sea, 63 nership heretofore existing between degrees, and at the mouth of the Lena Frank Gabel and W. C. Rupert has been river, 94 degrees, have been registered. degrees, and at the mouth of the Lena -St. Louis Republic.

Modern Greece. Modern Greece embraces only the southern part of Greece proper. The Turks still hold Macedonia, Thessaly and other Greek territory, from which they would be driven at once but for the support of Christian powers .- N. Y.
