Wheels and Wheelers.

People who ride bicycles seem to derive a great deal of pleasure from so doing, and we are glad they do, but they should recollect that there are people who do not ride bicycles, and that this class take pleasure in walking or driving, and that they, as well as the cyclists, have rights. Things have come to a pass where the cyclists seem to have forgotten this fact and some of them think the earth and all there is on it was made, constituted and appointed by a divine Providence for the sole and especial purpose of being used for a bicycle track. We are moved to make these few remarks by way of caution to our wheelmen and wheelwomen, for at present they respect no rights of anyone else, get four, five or six side by side and come sweeping down the streets, while the young fellow with his best girl out for a drive has to stop until they see fit to pass him. There is no objection to bicycles or bicyclists, but they must respect other people's rights if they want their own respected. We confess that it riles our temper to have a cyclist come charging at us at a street crossing, jangling his bell for us to get out of the way, and not turning his dodged wheel a fraction of a point of the compass from the line he has marked out for himself. These remarks are applied to the gentlemen only, for when a woman gets on a bike she has no one else knows where she will guide the thing to. Pedestrians and others using the streets or sidewalks can only put their trust in chance and take the consequences.

Shooting at Granite.

A fatal shooting affray occurred in Granite, Grant county, on April 21st. It seems that a report, derogatory to the character of Miss Cecelia McMahon had been set afloat, and John McMahon, brother to the girl, accused Louis Guttridge of starting it. The men met in front of S. W. Guttridge's store and got into a quarrel over it, when McMahon drew a gun and shot Guttridge twice through the body, killing him instantly. Sam Guttridge, brother to the murdered man, ran out and grappled with the murderer, receiving a bullet in the face in the scuffle. McMahon was arrested and taken to Canyon City. Neither one of the Guttridges were armed. They have always borne a good reputation at Granite, where they have resided for a number of years. After the shooting, excitement ran high and fears were entertained that McMahon would be lynched, but better counsel prevailed.—Prineville Review.

Cheered by a Bear.

An Indian boy named Mathew, belonging to the Nez Perse reservation at Lapwai, was almost killed on Sunday by a Cinnamon bear. The boy, with a white man, was out hunting chickens above the Mission, when their dog scared up a big she bear. She made for the boy, and though they both emptied their twenty-twos on her, she almost chewed the boy to pieces before he could be rescued from her clutches. The physician at the agency was called in to dress the wounds, which are liable to result in his death.—Walla Walla Statesman.

HIS OFFER WAS DECLINED.

"Sonny, what is that ugly brute good for?" "Good for? Good for? All I've got to say to her is 'Sick him, Beauty,' and she'd jump at yer throat and tear yer windpipe into a thousand pieces; yer couldn't beat her away with a crowbar an' a lighted kerosene lamp. Would yer like to see me do it?"—N. Y. Truth.

Too Conservative.

"How comes it," I said to the prisoner, "that you're in such a place as this?" "Well," he said, "I'm a kleptomaniac and only did a retail business." —Chicago Times-Herald.

An Additional Observation.

MILK A NUTRITIVE.

A Medical Man Who Existed for Thirty Days on It.

A medical man expresses the belief that a person could live for any length of time and take heavy exercise all the while on no other food than sweet milk. His conviction is the result of personal experiment.

He wanted to establish the fact that persons convalescing from sickness may grow stronger with no other nutriment than sweet milk, and that they are not obliged to take "something solid" to eat, as so many people imagine. He got into his grave as a result of overtaxing his weak stomach by putting "solid" food into it, and he maintained that the old belief as to bread being the first essential of human life is shown by his experiment to be erroneous.

His test was to live 30 days with only sweet milk as a nourishment. In the whole time he lost 5 1/2 pounds in weight, but no strength. He even attributes the loss of weight to the warmth of the weather and to excessive exercise on the bicycle and the daily manipulation of 16-pound dumbbells and other heavy weights. He took more exercise than usual in order to test the thing fairly. On the seventh day of the experiment he ran several fast races in a skillful manner, but was beaten in each race.

On the thirtieth day he again pitted himself against the same runner and got the best of his opponent, which certainly would tend to confirm his statement that he lost no strength during the 30 days' test. He drank four pints of milk daily for the last week. He thinks a healthy person should take about five pints of milk daily when no other food is being taken. His practice was to drink milk at intervals of two hours during the day, commencing at seven o'clock in the morning and continuing until ten at night. After that he would take no more until the next morning.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

VALENTINE KILLED LOVE.

A Farmer Disinherits His Daughter Because of a Comic One.

James Martin, a well-to-do farmer, recently died, leaving a will by which he disinherited his only daughter, the result of a disagreement about a valentine 50 years ago, says a Balletville (Pa.) special. It was a few days before St. Valentine's day, 50 years ago, when the daughter asked her father for a new dress. He refused to buy it for her. The girl took her father's refusal much to heart. On St. Valentine's day Mr. Martin received a valentine addressed to him in his daughter's handwriting.

It was a rough caricature, representing a miser counting and gloating over his money. He at once took his daughter to task for what he considered an insult. She denied that she sent the cartoon. They lived in the neighborhood another farmer who had treated a niece living with him brutally. Martin's daughter said that she and this girl had purchased each a valentine and that she (Miss Martin) had bought one entitled "The Honest Farmer," while the other girl had purchased the caricature to send to her harsh uncle. In addressing the envelopes the valentines, she said, became mixed.

Put in spite of explanations Mr. Martin would not believe his daughter, and from that day he never spoke to her. She soon married and lived on a farm adjoining, and, although the old man was on the most familiar terms with the husband and children, he never noticed her. He died the other day, leaving an estate valued at $45,000.

By his will he left his widow $30,000 and to his son-in-law the remainder, provided he survived his wife, the farmer's own daughter. If the son-in-law died first, then the money was to be divided among his three children. To his daughter Mr. Martin bequeathed "a package to be found in his trunk, tied with a green ribbon and sealed with green wax." When this was opened it was found to be the unfortunate valentine that had caused the estrangement of the farmer from his daughter half a century ago.—N. Y. Press.

Aerial Travel.

Prof. S. P. Langley is reported as saying in a recent interview, that, having proved both theoretically and practically that machines can be made to travel through the air, if he had the time and money to spend, he believed he could make one "on a scale such as would demonstrate to the world that a large passenger-carrying flying-machine can be a commercial as well as a scientific success."—Youth's Companion.

Real Question at Issue.

He was pressing, but she hesitated. She had had some experience and was inclined to be cautious. "You will be mine!" he exclaimed. "Say you will consent to make me the happiest of mortals!" She thought it sounded a good deal as if it had been memorized from a love story, but she let that pass. "Can we afford to marry?" she asked. He looked startled. "I'm sure I don't know," he answered. "How is your father fixed?"—Chicago Post.

Long Run by a Mouse.

A wheelman hung his bicycle from the ceiling of his cellar, not far from a swinging shelf on which food was kept. A mouse jumped from the wall to the tire of the front wheel, evidently hoping thereby to reach the shelf. The wheel started and the mouse naturally ran toward the highest part of it. It was able to stay on the top of the tire, but couldn't get enough of a foothold to jump to the wall. When found next morning it was very much exhausted, though still running. The cyclistometer showed that it had traveled over 28 miles.—Albany Express.
