THE DALLES, OREGON

PERSONAL MENTION.

Saturday's Daily. Mr. Ray Logan arrived home from Eugene last night. Mr. N. B. Brooks, the Goldendale attorney, is in the city. Misses Effie and Vesta Bolton left this morning for Goldendale, where they will visit friends. The family of Mr. Chas. Stone left for Seattle today, where they will make their home. Mr. Stone will join them later. Mrs. Graves, who has been visiting her mother here for several days, left for her home, North Yakima, this morning, going by way of Portland. Mr. E. Y. Judd, of the Pendleton scaring mills, arrived this morning, and in company with Mr. J. W. Russell, went down on the Regulator to White Salmon, where a team was waiting for them. They intend putting in two or three days fishing at Trout Lake. Monday's Daily. Mr. B. Savage of Wamic was in the city today. Mr. A. S. Mac Allister, who has been out to his ranch for a month or more, arrived home last night. Miss Laura Kelsay was a passenger on the Regulator Saturday for University Park, where she will visit her sister, Mrs. Marblehead, and be with her sister, Bertha, who is attending school there. She will remain for several weeks. C. W. Haight is in from his place in the southern part of the country. He reports crops in good condition in that neighborhood where they can be irrigated, but says his fields in the highlands which have never failed before, are likely to yield light crops this year.

Tuesday's Daily. Mrs. C. L. Schmidt and Miss Edith came up from Portland Saturday night. Mrs. Eliza McFarland left on this morning's train for Portland, where she will make her home with her son, E. B. McFarland. Messrs. Homer Angell and George Campbell, who have been students at the University of Oregon at Eugene for the past year, returned home last night. MARRIED. At the Obarr House this afternoon, May 22d, by Justice Filloon, John Henry Matthews and Mrs. Coven. BORN. Near Fairfield, Sunday, May 23d, to the wife of Robt. Gilbreth, a daughter. Oregon Man Wins It. The interstate oratorical contest between representatives of the educational institutions in Idaho, Washington and Oregon took place Saturday evening in the Taylor street First M. E. church. Fred Fisk, of the university of Oregon, won the decision, receiving the vote of two of three judges, while G. F. Johnson, of the Puget Sound university, representing the state of Washington, received one vote. J. A. Coffey, the third contestant, coming from the university of Idaho, and representing that state, was credited with having the finest composition and the most original and clear-cut thoughts, but he failed on the point of delivery. In palliation for this defect it must be said that there is no elocutionist in the institution where Mr. Coffey is studying. The contest is of widespread interest throughout the Northwest, as it is the first of its character yet held in Portland. State competitions have been entered into, but before last year the local victors of the states were not brought face to face on the wider arena. An association is being perfected, however, which has for its purpose an interstate contest each year. The judges selected for the occasion were Judge Galloway of Oregon City; Rev. Charles Edward Locke and Charles J. Schnabel of Portland. The points for consideration were originality, subject-matter, manner of treatment and delivery. No restrictions were placed as to the consideration of either, but the general result was of course affected by them in certain proportions.

Birthday Greeting. Yesterday being the third birthday of Aileen Kelley, several of her small friends were invited to her home to share with her the good things of the occasion. The guests came at 4 o'clock and were cordially received by their charming little hostess. An hour was happily spent with games and toys, when the hungry little folks thoroughly enjoyed the luncheon, so daintily served. Little Aileen was the recipient of several pretty gifts. She seemed to feel the dignity of approaching years, as she seriously assured every one that she was "five." At six o'clock the sleepy, but happy little people said good night, with many wishes that every day in the life of their hostess might be as bright and joyous as the one just passed. Those present beside the hostess were Geraldine, Gilbert and "Baby" Kelley, Dorothy and Prudence Bayley, Jessie Hosteler, Edna Pease and Aileen Eshelman. The Waters. Mr. Pague's report yesterday shows a rapid rise in the rivers above, up to Friday morning. At Northport the Columbia rose 2.3, at Wenatchee .9, at Lewiston .7 and at Weiser .3. The report further says: The rivers all have a less rise this morning, except at Northport, where the effects of the warm weather of Wednesday are already shown. The cool weather occurred twenty-four hours before it was expected, hence the rise by Wednesday next will not be as much as was looked for. The river here at 7 o'clock was at 41.5, a rise of .8 since yesterday morning. From the above data it is probable the 45-foot mark will be reached here by Wednesday, which will be about the limit for this year.

THE SHERIFF GOT HIM. Which Shows That There Are Many Ways of Doing Things. Boggs, the man who hired a team at Rufus a week or so ago from Bate Clark and sold it, and who afterwards persuaded the widow Newsome to gather her family around her and skip with him, is ornamenting the interior of the Wasco county jail this morning, with a fair chance of soon having larger and more permanent quarters in the penitentiary. When he left here on the boat, a telegram was sent to the officers at Portland, but in some manner he eluded them, and while they were watching the Southern Pacific train, Boggs, the widow and family took the Northern Pacific for Seattle, and from that port the boat for the haven of Victoria. Sheriff Driver traced him up and determined to have him, so early this week he went to Victoria. There before an august justice of the peace he told of Boggs sinning, and was promptly informed that horse stealing was not an extraditable offense. Driver knew this, but was out with a net to see what kind of fish he could catch. To a gentle insinuation that the law might be bent a little, the Britisher returned a chilling frolic, with the assertion that "the law was never bent in her majesty's dominions." Then Tom took another tack and sent parties to Boggs to hire him to go over to Port Townsend to assist in bringing over sheep. Boggs hadn't lost any sheep on the United States side of the line. However, after much manipulation our sheriff in some manner persuaded him to go on the boat and detained him until it pulled out. At any rate, whatever the process was, he arrived here this morning in charge of the sheriff and will have his trial next week. The widow Newsome and her four children were left in Victoria. For her it was a sad ending of a brevet honeymoon, sweet spell that was too beautiful to last, and that has probably ended forever.

MADE BALD BY X RAYS. Mr. Levy Finds the Bullet Inside His Skull, But Loses His Hair. William Levy, of Eau Claire, Wis., who recently had an X ray examination of his skull made by Prof. Fred S. Jones at the physical laboratory of the Minnesota State university had an experience in consequence not generally supposed to accompany that process. Levy was shot in the head about ten years ago by an escaping bank defaulter. The bullet has been somewhere in his head ever since, and in July he made up his mind to have it located. Accordingly he came up and sat from eight o'clock in the morning till ten at night for a Roentgen ray picture of his head. The bullet had passed into his skull just above the left ear, going toward the back of the head. After taking a couple of negatives they finally found about where the bullet was located. The doctors wrapped his head up in wires which were definitely located. A picture was taken through the skull from the front toward the back of the head, the tube from which the rays radiated being for this purpose placed inside his mouth. The picture thus secured showed the bullet very distinctly to be lying at the junction of two of the wires which crossed right under the occipital bone. It indicated also that the bullet had struck the back of the skull and turned forward again, for the point of the bullet, being further from the plate showed dimmer on the negative. These exposures had taken up nearly the whole day, but the patient felt no bad effects at the time. He had been warned that the experiment might cause him the loss of his hair, but that did not deter him from taking the risk. A very strong current, about 100,000 volts, had been passed through the tube in making the exposures. The next day Mr. Levy began to notice a peculiar effect on his skin wherever it had been exposed to the rays, and the hair on the right side of his head, which had been near the wire, began to fall out. In a few days the right side of his head was perfectly bald, his right ear had swollen to twice its natural size and presented the same appearance as if very badly frozen. Sores were visible on his head, his mouth and throat were blistered so that he could not eat solid food for three weeks, and his lips were swollen, cracked and bleeding. In fact, the long exposure to the X rays, while giving him no pain at the time, seemed to have produced very similar effects to a very severe burn. Mr. Levy has recovered from the effects of his burns, but he still has half a bald head. He is a plucky man, about 30 years of age, and intends to have the investigation carried further and the bullet removed. He has already written to Prof. Jones asking for another sitting. It is necessary now to have a negative showing just how far below the surface the bullet is located before the doctors decide whether the operation can be safely performed.—St. Paul Dispatch.

WRECK OF THE BALTIC SEA. No part of the world has such a record for wrecks as the Baltic sea. In some years one wreck a day occurred. The greatest number of wrecks recorded was 425 in one year and the least 154. About half of these vessels are total wrecks and all the crews are lost. It must be explained, however, that many of the vessels which the Baltic sees are old and worn, having failed to pass the board of trade survey and therefore sold to the Swedes and Norwegians for the Baltic sea trade.—Chicago News.

All or Nothing. The driver of the stage, which was rolling down the mountains as fast as six mules on the gallop could keep ahead of it, may have noticed that I was a little nervous, for after a bit he soothingly said: "No use to grip that railing so mighty hard, stranger. We shan't come to the danger p'int for half an hour yet." "Then it's ahead?" I queried. "Yes, three miles ahead, and I may say for your benefit that hangin' on won't do any particular good." "But I don't want to slide off." "And you won't. If anythin' goes it'll be mews and coach and the hull caboodle altogether, and as the drop is plump 800 feet you won't hev no use fur arnica or stickin' salve arterwards."—Chicago Tribune.

So Poetical. Poet (to farmer)—See what a beautiful prospect is unfolded in yonder billow fields, and hark! the voice of the plowman! Farmer—Yes, he's been cussing that mule since daylight, and it's one of them German mules that used to pull a beer wagon, so he can't understand a word of it.—American Planter.

Most of the world's supply of camphor comes from Japan and Formosa. Of late years the demand has begun to exceed the supply, and the question has arisen how the latter can be obtained. One of the reasons why camphor is becoming scarcer and dearer is that it is extensively used in the manufacture of celluloid. At present camphor is mainly produced from the so-called camphor tree, which attains a gigantic size in Japan, one specimen recently measured being 115 feet tall, and having a trunk over 14 1/2 feet in diameter. The tree is common in China, but as yet the production of camphor in that country is very limited. The camphor tree is a member of the laurel family, and is related in genus to the cinnamon tree. It is said that camphor can be produced from other species of trees. In Borneo a very aromatic camphor is obtained from the natural deposit of gum on the trunks of a species of tree indigenous to that island and Sumatra. Borneo camphor is rare and very costly.—Youth's Companion.
