DIAMONDS MADE TO ORDER.

Discovery of a Process for Making Stones of Large Size.

Diamonds are to be cheap. They will be made to order. Diamonds of a very small size have been produced artificially by local applications, as they cannot week in hed. If we cannot avoid frelarge dimensions.

This pressure again considerably increases the dissolution of the coal in the liquid iron.

While the mixture is cooling, the carbon crystallizes, partly in the form of real diamonds and partly in the form of similar stones. These crystals are then segregated by dissolving the iron in diluted muriatic acid. They are diamonds that cannot be distinguished from those found in South African mines.

Two years ago James Brown was at who lived on the upper Umpqua, and before her death she told Brown the following story, says the Oakland Gazette: Thirty years ago three Germans discovesed a fabulously rich mine in the Bohemia district, and while they were at work were murdered by the Indian woman's husband. She told where the bodies were buried, described the locality, and told were the pick, shovels, etc., were hidden, and described a chopped tree which stood near the mouth of the mine. About three weeks ago Brown for agents. Commission 50 per cent. imparted this information to Will Marcey, brother of the Marcey brothers of Oakland, and the two men left for the mountains. They returned a few days ago, and report having found the ruins of the cabin, the chopped tree and the caved-in mine; also what seemed to be the grave of the Germans. TRAVELS OF A DIAMOND, Story of a Paris Jeweler's Experience with a Very Fine Stone. Some years ago a Paris jeweler told a story of one diamond which had passed over his counter no less than 11 times. It was a beautiful stone of nearly four carats, of perfect color and luster, but easily identified by means of a small "feather" in the tip of the lowest part. He bought it from an East India dealer and had it set in a ring. It was sold to a countess in 1869, just before the outbreak of the Franco-Prussian war. The countess died in a few weeks, and the ring was worn by her husband. He was killed in the siege of Paris, and a few days after his death the ring was brought in the ring and sold it to the mon soldier. He was arrested, and the ring was sent to the family of the dead count. Before the siege ended they brought in the ding and sold it to the dealer in order to procure money to buy food. Directly after the siege it passed into the hands of an English tourist who visited the city, to get a look at the ruin wrought by the communists, and a year later back came the stone from the Indian buyer of the firm, who, on being written to and desired to tell how he got it, stated that it had been the property of an English tourist hunter who was killed by a tiger, and his friends sold the ring to get means to send the body home. The stone was reset, and soon found a purchaser in a prominent member of the demi-monde, who not long afterward was murdered past two weeks, left for Portland last in her room. Among the articles taken by the murderer was the ring, and the firm began to wonder how soon it would turn up. They had hot long to wait, for all their people had by this time learned about the stone, and were on the lookout for it. After six months it was found in the showcase of a jeweler in London. who had bought it from a firm? in Amsterdam. It was bought by the Paris agent, and sent back to be started afresh on its travels. It was purchased again by a woman of the town, who, six weeks later, was drawn out of the Seine with the gem on her finger, and, by a strange coincidence, it was offered to the firm that sold it by the police agents, the court having jurisdiction having ordered it to be sold. And so it went from hand to hand, attended with misfortune at every change and usually bringing death to the possessor. · Laborers in the Golconda mines used to say that when a stone was baptized if blood when first taken from the earth it caused the shedding of blood whereever it went, and the story of one such ill-omened gem goes far to confirm belief in such a superstition.-Jewelers

Rich Placer Strike.

The news comes in from the old camp at Rye Valley that Messrs. Fred Gardner and Charles Durkee have discovered dent of this city, and had many friends a new tract of placer ground on what is known as Shelton gulch, which will pay $50 per day to the man. The discoverers of this rich ground are now constructing a ditch to cover the claims with water, and when this is done they expect to take out a large amount of money.—Baker City Democrat.

GERMS IN THE DUSTPAN. The Sweepings of the Carpet Contain

Many Dangers to Health. To those who know the true inwardess of things the sight of a housemaid brushing a dusty carpet is suggestive of many evils. The death of Pasteur has reminded the world of what is constantly present in the thoughts of medical men-namely, that while micro-organisms are the great producers of disease dust is the great carrier of micro-organ isms. Now that we know these things, it is distressing to find how little our knowledge is put to practical use, and to see old customs still unchanged, old habits which we know to be destructive carried on, and to find the house maid on her knees, with her brush and dustpan, stirring up dust to the detriment of every one, and breathing germladen particles to her own destruction. It needs but a small amount of common sense to see that if carpets must continue, a thing greatly to be deprecated, they should be rubbed with a damp cloth rather than brushed, and that if, in deference to prejudice, they must be brushed, this should be done by a covered American sweeper, with plenty of damp tea leaves. Of all ways of removing dirt from a carpet the worst is by the use of the ordinary short brush, which involves the housemaid kneeling down in the midst of the dust which she so needlessly creates, and drawing it into her lungs with every breath. For ordinary household use something like lineoleum, something which can be washed with a wet cloth every morning, would seem to be the best covering for floors; but if carpets must be, and it is impossible to teach the present generation comfort at expense of future risks, at the least let us remember that carnets may be washed even where they lie; that, till the day of washing comes a closed sweeper is far better than a brush, and that the worst form of brush is one with a short handle .-British Medical Journal.

A DAY IN BED.

May Be Indulged In with Profit by Tired

If a vacation is impossible, try rest, advises a writer on women's work. There is no special satisfaction to the tired, over-worked housewife at this season to be told that she must try change of scene and moderate exercise. There' is no better preventive of nervous exhaustion, we are told, than regular, unhurried muscular exercise. If we could moderate our hurry, lessen our worry and increase our open air exercise a large portion of nervous diseases would be abolished. But the tired housekeeper realizes only too well that it is not exercise she needs half so much as rest. For those who cannot get a holiday the best substitute is an occasional day in bed. Many whose nerves are constantly strained in their daily vocation have discovered this for themselves. A Spanish merchant in Barcelona told his medical man that he always went to bed whenever he could be spared from business and laughed at those who spent their holidays on toilsome mountains. One of the most successful working women in England, who had for many years conducted a large wholesale business, retains excellent nerves at an advanced age, owing, it is said, to the habit of spending one entire day of each quent agitation we ought, if possible, to give the nervous system time to recover between shocks. If the idea of a whole day in bed seems absurd to the tired mother and housewife at least determine to take half an hour's seclusion and rest after lunch, and it will prove a saving and not a loss of time.-Chi-

SCIENTIFIC REASON GIVEN. Why the Eyes of a Painted Portrait Foi-

-Wollaston's curious discovery was that by adding to each pair of eyes a nose directed to the right or the left, the eyes lose their front direction, and look to the right or left, according to the direction of the nose. By means of a flap representing the lower features in a different position, as Dr. Wollaston remarks, "a lost look of devent abstraction in an uplifted countenance of inquisitive archness in the leer of a younger face turned downward and eb-liquely toward the opposite side." As by changing the direction of the lower features we change the direction of the eyes, says Notes and Queriez, so by changing our position, the eye of the portrait apparently follows us. If a vertical line be drawn through the tip of the nose and half way between the eyes, there will be the same breadth of head, of cheek, of chin and of neck on each side of this middle line, and each iris will be in the middle of the whole eye. If we now move to one side, the apparent horizontal breadth of every part of the head and face will be diminished, but the parts on each side of the middle line will be diminished equally, and at any position, however oblique, there will be the same breadth of face on each side of the middle line, and the iris will be in the center of the whole of the eyeball, so that, being on a flat surface, the iris will be seen in front of the picture or obliquely.

Mountain Country. "On my first circuit I had a lesson n human nature that I have never forzotten," said a Methodist minister to a Washington Star reporter.

"The circuit was in the mountains of West Virginia, and among the members of my church was a widow, who, in adlition to the loss of her husband, had suffered final earthly parting with four of her children, leaving but two, a girl and a boy nearly grown.

"One night I was asked to hasten to her cabin, which I did, reaching there just in time to be with her son when he died from the effects of an accident.

"The mother, although deeply grieved, acted more calmly than I peeted, and early in the morning I went home, returning in the afternoon. I found the widow in the paroxysm of tears. I tried to comfort her with the usual Christian consolation. Finally she quieted down enough to say:

""Tain't only that he died. I know he's a heap better off."
