Looking for a Ledge.

The Grant's Pass Mining Journal, BAYS:

A. J. Barlow, Dr. E. Mingus and E. C. Cornelius left by wagon on Tuesday for the South Umpqua. Thereby hange a tale. When the dead body of Ed. Schiefflin was found some weeks ago in a lonely cabin, twenty miles east of Canyonville, by its side was found some rich ore and in the pan was about $4 in gold. It appears that when the messenger of death found the veteran prospector, the latter had discovered the ledge for which he had searched so long and laboriously. The gentleman who left this week for the scene of his labor profess to know where that ledge is to be found and have gone in search of it. It is surmised that the information came to them through Mrs. Schiefflin, with whom Col. Barlow has been in communication. But whether such be the source of their information or the locality was revealed by the spirits-let us hope that they will find it. It is an interesting fact that the locality where they will make their search lies just across the divide from the Elk creek

Results of Extravagance.

The town of Forest Grove has evidently been "living fast." Its city council at the regular session Saturday evening decided to levy a tax on all business houses and professional men, varying from $5 to $25 annually. Merchants must pay $25, as will drug stores; banks, $20; livery stables and groceries, $15; butchers, hardware stores, doctors and dentists, $10; printers and barbers, $6; tinners, $5; lawyers, $4. Telephone, telegraph and insurance companies will also be called upon to contribute. Cows at large must pay $4. Men are taxed $1. This is to raise money for a sinking fund to meet the city's bonded indebtedness. Aiready people are roasting the city council, and the tax is likely to cause a commotion. Business men would many

INDIAN DIVORCES.

Summary Proceedings of the Dissatisfied Married Brave.

Scant Ceremony Used in Casting Of the Galling Yoke Which Binds Him to His Objection. able Squaw.

With most of the plains Indians marriage consists simply in picking out the maiden, leading her to a cabin or wigwam, and installing her as mistress of the house and cornfield, sometimes with the necessary preliminary of paying the father a pony or two or an installment of blankets, and occasionally with some slight ceremony performed by chief or medicine man. And when the brave place lacked was water and good society, grows tired of his partner he can get rid of her as easily as he won her.

The people who are now flocking to the Dakotas or Oklahoma to get divorces would be supremely happy if they could throw off the galling bonds of wedlock as easily as does the reservation Indian. The fact having been formally announced by the head man of the clan, the divorce takes place when the tribe is gathered at a dance. When all are assembled and the circle formed. the discontented warrior strikes a drum used by the revellers, (gives away a few presents (ofttimes making a present to the squaw he intends to take next), and then, in a short, bombastic speech, he stigmatizes his wife by giving her over to the tender mercies of other braves. while they look upon him enviously and consider that he has performed an act of bravery in his desertion.

Often as many as half a dozen divorces are thus obtained at a single dance; no tedious waiting, no courts, no lawyers, and no trouble about alimony or the custody of the children. And the squaws thus cast off as a general thing seem to take it as a matter of course, and before the close of the lance are using the wiles known and used by the women of the world over in an effort to repair as speedily as possible the break in their hearts and matrimonial experience.

With the taking of land in severalty and putting on of citizenship, however, the Indian finds that he has cemented the ties that were so loose before, for the courts everywhere are deciding that the tribal marriages are legal and binding upon the Indian who becomes a citizen. And if the weight of one legal marriage wears somewhat heavily upon a white man, how must it be with the red man who has contracted two, three, four, or even more alliances which the court now declares legal and at the same time takes away his former avenue of relief? The first court divorces ever given any member of the southwest reservation tribes was granted in the district court at El Reno several weeks ago. The fair plaintiff in the case was a fullblooded Kiowa girl, whose name was something like Beahl Koo, but perhaps it had never before been so reduced to writing until it appeared upon the records of the court. She was totally unfamiliar with the English language, and it was necessary to tell her troubles by the aid of an interpreter, but the trouble was to find some one that could interpret the weird dialect of Kiowa. Judge Jack Stillwell, the ex-scout, was present, and, although quite familiar with the Comanche tongue, he was comnelled to confess that he could not handle Kiowa. A way was soon found whereby she could tell her tale of woe to Judge Burford. Caddie Konkie (Black Crane), a leading member of the Kiowa tribe, and a very intelligent man, was present, and while he could not talk English, he could speak Kiowa, the Diamond Jubilee. Only $1.50. Big and interpret it into Comanche, and Judge Stillwell then interpreted it into English. She stated that she was not quite 16 years of age, and that she had been married to a white man named King for three years, but that he had left her over two years ago, and that she was now living with her parents. After hearing all the facts the court granted her privilege to assume her maiden name, or any other name she saw fit.

At the next term of the district court at Tologo, D county, however, will be presented an application for divorce, the like of which is without a parallel, and the judge and attorney will look in vain for precedent decisions in all the law reports extant.

Yellow Bonnet, a Cheyenne Indian of some note, living on his allotment near this city, has applied for a blanket divorce from four wives. SIGNS OF APPROACHING AGE.

Now a Man Showed That He Was Grow ing Old Without Knowing It. A man, apparently slightly past midüle life, whose hair was tinged with gray and noticeably thin on top, sat near me at the theater. As the curtain rose for the the same age entered and occupied the vacant seat between us. He looked at the other fixedly. The look was exchanged, and in a second each had the other cordially by the hand. The conversation told me that they had been schoolmates who had not met in many years

"By Jove, Charlie!" exclaimed the first, "it does me good to see you. You haven't changed much more than I have and I am not a day older than when we got our diplomas.'

"I can't quite agree with you, Tom," answered the other, "but I don't feel very old yet. I see you still enjoy the theater, and expect you have kept up your literary taste for the last 30

"Thirty years!" repeated Tom. "How the years fly! Do you remember how they used to drag? Theaters! Well, I child, and at Trig he has a large threedo go now and then, but the plays and story building, which he is filling with acting are not what they used to be. As entomological specimens. He heard of to books, I still read them, but none of Mr. Dunn some time ago, and has emgood book written for a quarter of a century. The new ones give me the dyspepsia worse than what I cat. Do you emember the meals we had on the old Vermont farm? Those were happy days! Thirty years and more ago! Strange: but I don't show a sign of age. wonder where this confounded draught is coming from. I feel neuralgia on top of Mexico. He has an indefinite comof my head now."

"Tom, old boy," replied the other, you are deceiving yourself, for you have shown marked signs of approaching age within three minutes. Your belief that theaters and actors have degenerated, that new books are below the standard, that childhood cooking was perfection and that time flies so very fast are all indications that you are on the downhill side of life. The slight draught that you say brings a tinge of neuralgia to the top of your head, where. I notice, the hair is rather thin. wouldn't have been thought of 30 years ago. Then here you are in the very front seats of a theater. No use denying the signs, Tom. We are getting along, and must admit what others plainly see."-N. Y. Herald.

DIET OF SCHOOL CHILDREN.

Articles Which Should Form the Daily

Every successful farmer and everyone who cares for young animals knows very well that the food given them during the first portion of their lives has much to do with building up healthy, hardy, strong constitutions for future usefulness, but until very recently few people have seemed to be aware that the diet of school children is one of the most important items for them to consider. Boys are more easily fed than girls, their romping and exercise generally giving them much better appetites; but even boys, when they are very studious, are apt to get a little run down and lose their digestive vitality. Then they neglect their food, and come home sometimes with the luncheon in their baskets, and, in answer to inquiries, de- boat rammed his hand into his pocket, clare they were not hungry and posi- pulled out a jackknife, a razor or a

When a child comes home with its midday luncheon in a basket, its physical condition needs looking after It is often said that girls have an inordinate appetite for sweets, and that boys are much more easily satisfied. Perhans this may be so in certain localities, but the average boy is likely to be quite as fond of sweet things as his sister. Many a youngster eats bread and butter when he prefers cake, because he has learned that he must eat or he cannot play. It is this feeling that keeps him in better condition than the girl in the same household. If the girl would take as much exercise in proportion, her appetite would be quite as good. However this may be, a great deal of pains ought to be taken to provide relishable, wholesome and dainty luncheons for school children. Fruit should always be included. There is scarcely a season of the year when one may not have apples, and these are, of all fruits, the most healthful.

An excellent meal can be made out of sandwiches, apples and boiled eggs. Sardine sandwiches are very relishable, and as sardines are not at all expensive, they should be used, if the children like them. If milk is plenty, a bottle or can of it is an excellent addition to the midday diet for school children. Cookies, crackers and sweetmeats are to be used sparingly, and every effort should be made to encourage children in cultivating a taste for plain and simple food. -N. Y. Ledger.

A BUTTERFLY CATCHER.

An Old Man Chasing the Idlers for the Richest Man in the World.

Chasing butterflies for the richest man in the world is now the occupation of one of the most striking looking characters seen in the streets of Lo first time a spectacled man of about Angeles. He is 82 years old, keen-eyed straight and vigorous, with the step and alertness of a man whose life has been spent out of doors. His name is George W. Dunn, and he has been snaring butterflies since 1849, when he came to the state. He is a naturalist of the Audubon type. He knows all the books by heart, but he knows better than all the book of nature, and has spent his existence turning its leaves. He has searched the fields and forests of all the Pacific states, of British Columbia, lower California, Mexico and South America, and has 12 times tramped over central Americaalways after plants and insects.

Over at Trig, England, lives an old man who is chiefly known to the world because of his immense wealth, but who if he were poor, would be famous be cause of his researches and knowledge as a naturalist. He is Baron de Roths the modern trash.-There hasn't been a ployed him to make a collection on the coast of Mexico. Dunn has already several thousand butterflies ready to ship to August Belmont at New York, who will forward them to Trig. Each is placed in a three-cornered envelope, so arranged that the delicate inclosure cannot be injured. In a few days he will leave for Revila Gigedo, on the east coast mission, and will be a long time completing the baron's collection. As he appears certain to be good for half a century more of life, he does not need to hurry. Indeed, he says the philosophy of life is this-live slowly.-San Francisco Ex-

"It happened in Galveston harbor in 1888, and at the time I was captain of the Houston team. the champions of the Texas league. you to warn all those who have steel weapons concealed on their persons. If you don't part with those weapons you lay yourselves open to danger. The steel will attract the lightning. So look out!' FASHIONS IN DOGS' NAMES. "Sport," "Spot" and "Rover" No Longer Employed.

Fashions in dog names are undergo ing a radical change. The formerly familiar Sport and Spot and Rover are as completely a thing of the past as a summer's straw hat or last year's comic opera. Every dog has its day, and theirs is over. Their departed spirits roam the happy hunting grounds and their earthly quarters are filled with a race of sturdier canines responding to sturdier names, says the Chicago Times-Herald.

Rob Roy McGregor is the romantic title of a handsome Scotch collie, the pet of a dozen children of the North side. Peter Kellev, a fox terrior, roams the streets of the same locality, and Rum Punch and Gin Cocktail are two skyes frequenting 'he Lake Shore drive, whose intoxicating names explain their hatred of water. Irish appellations are in the ascendency. Patrick Jarsfield is a Chicago fox terrier, whose feminine owner enjoyed the story of the Celtic hero's exploits as caroled by Plunkett Greene. "Yim Yoolan" from the lips of an army girl calls an ugly Yorkshire terrier to be duly admired by diplomatic callers. Paddy familiarly and Paderewski on state occasions is the name of a hairy specimen of appropriate amber hue who makes life a burden to passing evelists on Grand boulevard.

Billy Sykes is the baptismal prerogative of a South side brindle bull, while his brother in Lake View sedately unswers to Lord Chumley. Chimmie Fadden is the ugliest bull in Chicago.

WOMEN AS MAGNETS.

David Could Vouch for Some Wonderful Things They Did. "You don't believe those stories about women being human magnets, do you?"

Dora asked. "Some of them are mighty attractive," David said, looking at her keenly. Dora blushed.

"I don't mean that," she said; "I mean their doing such great thingslifting half a dozen men and all those tricks. Do you believe it?" "Well, I don't know," David reflectively answered; "I saw a woman to-dayshe wasn't more than five feet high, and slight at that-I saw her just lift a finger-it was right in the street, crowds of people around her-she raised her finger and-and-" "Well, for pity's sake, what?" exclaimed Dora, impatiently. "Don't be so long about it."

"I don't go so far as to say she had electrical powers," David pursued, calmly; "I won't undertake to explain what it was, but this much I vouch for, for I saw it with my own eyes-the moment she raised that little fingerit had a dainty pink nail on it-a heavily loaded street car that was passing came to an instant stop."

But Dora, with heightened color, declared that if ever another woman lived who was married to so mean a man, all she had got to say was that she pitied her.-N. Y. Recorder.
