The Portuguese in Bawaii.

One effect of the reciprocity treaty concluded between the United States and Hawaii in 1875 was to create a pressing demand for labor to carry out the many new agricultural and industrial enterprises projected. Through the agency of Dr. Hillebrand, who was residing in the island of Maderia in 1877, arrangements were made for the emigra-Madeira. A ploneer company of 180 Portuguese arrived in September, 1878, from Cunchal, and since then over 10,-000 more have been added to the population of the island, and, with their natural increase, they now number about 15,000. They are an exceedingly valusble addition to the white element of the islands. Their status also in the new territory will be regulated by treaty between the United States and Portugal.

NEARLYSMOTHERED BYVIOLETS

Miss Sadie' Connolly Has a Narrow Escape in New York.

Miss Sadie Connolly, an actress, was half smothered by the sweet breath of violets the other night. She was able to be out of the bed the next day to receive in person the congratulations of friends, though still nervous and upset over her extraordinary experience.

When not on the road she has been at home in her snug flat at 1445 Second avenue, of which her sister Julia is housekeeper. The two sisters live entirely alone. Monday morning an expressman Jelivered at Miss Connolly's flat a huge box of violets shipped all the way from California in a bed of moist moss. There were nearly 3,000 separate flowers. The penetrating odor filled the flats. Miss Connolly's bedroom has no means of ventilation except a door opening into the front parlor and another communicating with her sister's bed-

The air being chilly 'the actress retired in the midst of her violets with the windows all closed. The next morning tion of Portaguese from the grares and her sister found her unconscious. A physician who was promptly called brought her back to earth after having dumped the violets outdoors. These he said were partly responsible for the young woman's condition. As they were cut flowers and in the process of decay they had added greatly to the carbonic acid in the room.

THE YANKEE BIRD.

About the Origin of the Faota Christmas Turkey.

Our Barnyard Gobbler is Not the Direct ndant of American Stock, But a Relative Imported from Mexico.

Among the luxuries belonging to the high conditions of civilization exhibited by the Mexican nation at the time of the Spanish conquest was the ession by Montezuma of one of the most extensive zoological gardens on record, says the Washington Star. It embraced nearly all of the animals of that country, with others brought at great cost from distances. It is stated by historians that turkeyscalled by the Spanish adventurers "a kind of peacock"-were furnished in large numbers as food to the beasts of prey in the emperor's menagerie.

At that time the bird had been do mesticated and reared in Mexico for hundreds of years. It was earried by the Spaniards to the West Indies, whence it was taken to Europe early in the sixteenth century. Before long it became in Europe highly appreciated for its flavor. Being known to be of foreign origin, a report gained ground that the fowl had been obtained from Turkey, that being a region little known in western Europe. In this way it obtained the name by which it has since been designated.

People coming to the United States from Europe brought this Mexican fowl to the United States, and the progeny of the stock thus imported and fetched back to the continent whence it was originally derived furnishes Yankee tables to-day. In fact, the contemporary turkey of the barnyard did not belong here originally It is not derived from the wild turkey of the United States, which is quite another species, with dark meat on the breast and other differences plainly distinguishable. On the other hand, the wild Mexican turkey has white meat on the breast and resembles our tame turkey in all other points.

There are two species of wild turkey in North America. One is confined to the eastern and southern parts of the United States while the other is native to the Rocky mountains, parts of Texas, New Mexico, Colorado, Arizona, and extends along eastern Mexico southward. Zoo'ogists were a long time finding this out, being puzzled meanwhile to account for the marked difference in color and habits between the wild and domestic birds of the country. That a dark-meated fowl should acquire white meat through domestication would seem indeed surpris-

In its wild state the Mexican turkey derives nourishment from p insects, scratching with its feet for food. It is very shy. The birds live in families like wild geese, keeping sentinels on the watch when the flock is feeding. They are so heavy that they are not fond of taking flight, but the swiftest dog cannot overtake them in running. The female lays from three to twelve roundish, red-spotted eggs, and hatches them out in thirty days. In Yugatan and northern Guatemala this bird is replaced by a third species, less in size, but more striking in appearance, the tail having spots some what like the "eyes" in the tail of a peacock.

Meyer-Vierz.

Mr. Leopold Meyer and Mrs. Bertha Viera were married last evening at the bride's residence in this city, Rev. IL. Gray performing the ceremony.

Not long after the two were made one they were treated to such a charivari as is seldom presented to anyone. There were young folks and old, big cans and little, noises great, noises small, noises varied, mixed, discordant, soul-rending. After this serenade had been kept up for some time, Mr. Meyer surrendered and served refreshments to the crowd, its members being mostly his best friends. Mr. and Mrs. Meyer left on the early morning train for Portland and will be absent for a week or more.

SPOILED THE SPEECHES.

Disastrous Effect of Foolish Questions Upon Congressional Oratory.

There are times when the question or remark of a persistent interrupter will destroy the effect of a speech and dis ourage the orator almost to the point of breaking down, says the Troy Times. When Bryan, of Nebraska, in the Fiftythird congress, was in the midst of a rhetorical climax and with arms up lifted was gushing a very familiar line, the house was convulsed by the question of Walker, of Massachusetts:

'Who wrote that?" The whole thing was so ridiculous that it was five minutes before Bryan could go on. Here is another: Thomas Bartlett, of Vermont, was renowned for his flights of elaborate rhetorical oratory, and a seat in congress was the special goal of his ambition. When he was elected a story of how he had been silenced by an audience of college boys got around, and on the occasion of the new member's first appearance the house was prepared to receive him in anything but a serious spirit. Rising to indorse a proposition which had just been vigorously attacked he began to declaim impressively: "Sir, were it not for the rules of the house I would pour upon the opponents of this measure the vials of my wrath-" He got no farther. Mr. Polk, of Tennessee, was upon his feet in a moment, moving, with every appearance of eager interest, "that the rules be suspended and the gentleman allowed to pour!" Such a disconcerting burst of laughter followed that the unfortunate orator could only subside wrathfully into silence and his seat.
