BORN.

In this city, Sept. 14th, to the wife of Ernest V. Jensen, a daughter.

HE WAS TOO QUICK.

This Genial Man Pulled the Wrong Rope and Was Humiliated.

Once in awhile everybody meets a man who seems to regard himself as another Atlas. The whole world is, in his opinion, resting upon his shoulders and he constitutes himself a sort of public protector. He tells women how to train their children, gives business pointers to the men, advises with the girls concerning their love affairs and takes the boys into his confidence.

One of these good souls occupied a seat in a Payne avenue street car the other day and it didn't take him long to get upon familiar terms with most of the other passengers. He began by offering a penny to a child that sat near him.

The little one's mother was young and fair and the good man's generosity to the child touched her heart. She smiled at what he said to her and once seemed to be upon the point of getting confidential, but the car had stopped and somebody got on. The genial man immediately picked the child up and held it upon his knees in order to make room for the newcomer.

Then he asked somebody at the other end of the car how the baseball game had resulted, and informed a young girl across the aisle that a bundle was about to slip from her lap, after which he jounced the child up and down, asked how old it was, where it lived and what his papa's name was.

Presently a lady wanted to leave the car. The conductor was busy talking to a passenger upon the rear platform, and didn't notice that anyone was motioning to him from inside.

"These conductors are very careless," said the genial man, depositing the child in the seat that he had occupied himself, and preparing to ring the bell. By this time the car was very close to the crossing at which the lady wanted to get off, and he had to hurry.

So it happened that he grasped the wrong rope and rang the fare register instead of the bell.

That aroused the lion in the conductor, who rushed into the car and wanted to know what the genial man meant.

"Can't you see that that lady wants to leave the car?" was the reply.

"Well, you can't stop it by ringing up fares," snarled the conductor. "That'll cost you an extra nickel."

"No it won't," said the genial man, getting mad.

"It will or you'll get off the car," said the conductor, who wanted to know the president of this company.

"Oh, yes! That's an old gag. They all try to work it. You give me a nickel, or I'll put you off."

The genial man's face had become very red, and seeing that the conductor, who was big and brawny, would not be bluffed, he handed out a nickel.

Meantime the car had gone about two blocks beyond the crossing at which the innocent cause of all the trouble had wanted to get off, so it was necessary for her to walk back.

When the car had got started again, the genial man leaned over to the fair young mother who sat near him and said:

"If these conductors were not brought to time occasionally passengers would not be allowed to exercise any rights at all. I'm sorry there were ladies present when this trouble occurred. If there hadn't been I wouldn't have allowed that fellow to ever take his car back to the barn!"—Cleveland Leader.
