The Walla Walla Statesman informs us that the races at that place are unusually fine this year, and that a great deal of interest is manifested by the people of Walla Walla, It states further that the track is in perfect shape and the weather is very favorable, and under such conditions it would be hard for the fair to be a failure.

Since the rain has set in our people are beginning to feel the want of stone pavements or some other contrivance on the principal streets to keep down the mud, which is continually covering the crosswalks and making it next to impossible for ladies to travel around town. Besides, when it is this bad at present, what will it be before the winter is over? Smaller towns than this can afford good streets, why should we not be able to do the same?

THE STICKEEN RIVER ROUTE .

A Reliable and Interesting Account by W. K. Lear of Fort Wrangle.

At the request of Judge Mays of this place for information concerning the Stickeen river route, William K. Leer, postmaster at Fort Wrangle, who is an old Grand Army officer and friend of the judge, sends the following, which he says is a correct and reliable statement concerning this route to the gold fields in Alaska: in Alaska: "There has been a great deal said and done to devise a route for entering the Yukon gold fields, and to my mind it is a demonstrated fact that the route by Skagway or Dyea is an impracticable one for any body or quantity of men at one time. The last rush to those points has clearly demonstrated this fact with death to the human family and horses, and the hardships therein incurred.

"I have had the pleasure of passing over the route myself, and I found it in no sense of the term easy, with only twenty-five pounds on my back. Timber and lumber is becoming scarce; boats sold as high as $500 to $1,000 in the last rush, and the trails in passing fore entering the Yukon are both dangerous to life and property, and I believe across the Mill creek bridge, so that the grade, and the Dominion government were beautiful, and showed by their

The grand jury at Pendleton Thursday afternoon exploded a bomb that has been in preparation for some time, and has been awaited with more or less anxiety. Frank X. Schempp, a saloonkeeper in Pendleton, and Thomas J. Means, formerly city marshal, were indicted for gambling. Poker caused the trouble in each instance. Means is indicted for playing the game himself, and Schempp for allowing gambling on his premises. William Wells and John Estes, of Athena, were also indicted. More indictments for the same offense are expected tomorrow.

At about 12:30 yesterday, John W. Backus, a well-known resident of Portland, killed himself by jumping from the sixth story of the Worcester building on to the stone pavement sixty feet below. It was evidently a determined attempt to end his life, and it proved few days. The Equitable are writing a successful. There were no outward evidences of the terrible fall he had sustained, not a blood stain or scar on his body, but when the morgue attaches arrived to take charge of the remains it was found that nearly every bone in his body was broken. At a late hour that afternoon Coroner Koehler, in looking over a package of papers that Backus had in his pocket at the time of the tragedy, found a letter addressed to his wife which confirmed the theory that he committed suicide. was a long communication and referred principally to his personal affairs, parthat for some time Backus had been since that time. contemplating suicide, The letter which was written in German, concluded with the words, "Good bye, loving wife, for the last time."
