Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any season, but perhaps more generally needed when the languid, exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, indigestion, constipation, dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. 50c and $1.00 per bottle at Blakeley & Houghton's drug store. Did You Ever Think. That a kind word put out at interest brings back an enormous percentage of love and appreciation? That though a loving thought may not seem to be appreciated, it has yet made you better and braver because of it? That the little acts of kindness and thoughtfulness day by day are really greater than one immense act of goodness once a year? That to be always polite to the people at home is not only more ladylike, but more refined than having "company manners"? That to judge anybody by his personal appearance stamps you as not only ignorant but ill-bred? That to talk and talk and talk about yourself and your belongings is very tiresome for the people who listen?—Detroit Free Press. Rice Meringue Pudding. Four tablespoonfuls rice, wash, add one quart of milk; let it stand to soak half an hour, then put on to boil. When it begins to boil, set back on the range and simmer two hours or until well cooked. Then drop in one at a time and stir well the yolks of four eggs, the grated rind and half the juice of one lemon, piece of butter about the size of a walnut, a little nutmeg or any preferred spice; sweeten to taste and add a pinch of salt. Put in the pudding dish, beat the whites of the eggs to a stiff froth, add two teaspoonfuls of powdered sugar, spread over the pudding and brown. Serve either cold or hot.—Ladies' World. Brothers in Adversity. "I discovered a gold mine," said the forty-niner. "I invented a torpedo boat," replied the genius. Then they shook hands like brothers and pooled their capital to buy a cheap dinner.—Detroit Free Press.

RAILWAY MURDERS.

Dangers of Isolated Carriages in England.

Offer Opportunities for Thieves and Murderers to Commit Crime—The American System Is Preferred.

The arguments in favor of the "corridor" or "American" system of traveling for general railway passengers in England every day grows more emphatic and incontrovertible. The newspapers contain almost daily accounts of awful murders or attempts to murder by persons usually unknown, who have made good their escape from the little isolated carriages and left their victims to be "discovered" in some casual fashion. Only a few days ago another horrible tragedy, that might have occurred to anybody in the same situation, took place during the short railway ride of not more than 20 minutes between Hounslow station and the great London terminus, Waterloo. A woman, a barmaid from a tavern close to the Hounslow station, got into a carriage alone, and her body was found on the arrival of the train at Waterloo stuffed under a seat, the head horribly battered. She had started out to meet her lover, and in the train must have been attacked and murdered by some brute, whose identity up to the present is undiscovered.

The horror of the thing must appeal strongly to every woman who has ever been in London or is acquainted with the English method of travel. The uppermost object of the ordinary man or woman who travels a long or short distance is to get into a carriage alone. In the small, cramped compartments you feel in too close quarters to want to be bothered with strangers, therefore you naturally do your best to get into a carriage where you won't be "worried." But recent dreadful events have made people nervous of the lonely carriage. Women shun it because of awful stories of violence and deaths that have come unawares upon some poor soul who has set out in good health and spirits, while men shun it because of the stories of blackmail and slander of which unprincipled women frequently make them the victims. The days of the old English "compartments" are, indeed, numbered, and it will not be long, I am sure, before "American trains" are the rule on every line in the kingdom.

Traveling in England is very expensive work, at any rate. The fares being divided into three classes, the very poorest and meanest accommodations, which they call "third class," cost about the same rate which in America is charged for the ordinary train. If you have a third-class ticket, however, you cannot buy a Pullman car ticket. To be entitled to purchase superior accommodation of this kind you must primarily invest in a "first-class" ticket, which costs three times the amount of a third-class, and not until then are you allowed to buy Pullman car accommodations. If you are going for a long journey (or as long a one as you can take in England) this makes the cost about four times the amount you would pay if you did not have a luxurious soul and long for springs and cushions.

I hear, however, that to meet the demand of the vast body of Americans who are coming over here for the "diamond jubilee," there is to be a complete bouleversement of the train service in Great Britain, and cars such as we are accustomed to in the states, and prices to match, will be one of the white stones marking the latter glories of her majesty's sixtieth year upon the throne.—Chicago Times-Herald.

DANGERS OF NERVES.

By Which the Women of To-Day Are Beset.

It used to be a matter of faith, years ago, that we possessed nerves, for we were unconscious of them. Nowadays, however, they have become of most vital importance; they are, so to speak, "household pets." It seems that "temper" has gone out of fashion; so far, at least, as we are concerned, and though it is possible to admit that our neighbors may suffer from attacks of temper, we never do—no, we have "nerves." There is a sort of necessary dignity about the possession of nerves, though we own they cause us trouble. We speak in quite a reproachful way of "a woman who has no nerves," just as if this meant the same as that she is without refinement and tenderness. Nerves are, however, dangerous pets, for they are apt to become our masters. Indeed, to nerves are ascribed the unwholesome craving for excitement, the morphia habit and the excessive use of stimulants among women, as well as a variety of other evils. Nerves, no doubt, would be kept in check better if only we were simpler. Japanese women are charmingly serene and good tempered, and their freedom from nervous troubles may be largely ascribed to the absence of small worries in matters domestic. They are saved worries about dress, for the fashion of their costume never varies, and the absence of draperies and crowds of ornaments economizes money and greatly saves labor, as any housekeeper could tell who knows the fret and irritation of keeping these things pretty and free from dust in an "under-servanted" establishment.—Boston Budget.

Teacher Without Pupil.

A peculiar state of affairs exists in one corner of Kit Carson county, Col. A school-teacher there has a fine schoolhouse, but not a single pupil, and as she is conscientious she is perplexed as to whether it is her duty to go out on the prairie and hasso the first creature that looks to be in need of instruction or wait in the hope of a voluntary appearance of something capable of being instructed.

A GREAT FEAT.

The Mesa Encantada Explored at Last.

After Many Years of Conjecture the Truth Concerning the Famous Rock is Now Positively Known.

For the first time in the history of man the celebrated Mesa has been mounted. The honor belongs to Prof. William Libbey, of Princeton university, New Jersey, and the fact has been scientifically established that the summit is uninhabited, and, as far as the party could discover, has ever been. There were absolutely no traces of animal life.

It may be that new specimens of flora have been found that existed in the prehistoric world, but sufficient examination has not yet been made to determine this fact. The Mesa Encantada is said to be the only spot on the face of the globe where the flowers of the period of long ago can exist without the contamination and war of plant life with the world of the present day.

Prof. Libbey succeeded in making his much-talked-of ascent of the encantada a few days ago. The trip to the summit was fraught with great perils, and the result is of little value from an archaeological standpoint.

The party consisted of Prof. Libbey, H. L. Bridgeman, of Brooklyn, and the correspondent of the Times-Herald. Every preparation had been made for the ascent, there were great kites and balloons ready for use, but it was decided to throw a line across the top of the Mesa with a gun, borrowed for the purpose from the United States life-saving service.

The first shot was too low. The second, carrying a steel wire, went over the summit, but took two days to draw the cord which was attached to a long-rope over the rough, rocky surface of the spot described by Coronado in his report to the king of Spain nearly three centuries ago as being the strongest natural fortification in the known world.

When the ropes were made fast a block was arranged, and a great chain of boards, 20 feet across, was fastened to it. A huge rope was sent to the summit without tipping, and then Prof. Libbey made the ascent. It was dangerous, exceedingly so. As the professor came close to the summit he had to hang on by one hand, while with the other, he disengaged the ropes of the chair, which had caught in the rough rocks. The remainder of the party then made the ascent, and were assisted on the surface by the professor.

Next a great difficulty presented itself in the form of a gaping chasm. This was crossed on the ropes, and the ten acres of the surface of the rock were explored by the daring scientists.

They spent the entire day there, searching for the evidences of the village, said to have existed 500 years ago, but there was nothing to indicate that it ever had existed in reality. There were monuments of rock, such as the Indians built in the ages that have gone by, but that was all.

There were some pools of water that had collected, but whether they were worn by the action of small particles of rock carried by the winds or whether they were in reality constructed by the Acoma Indians in the centuries that have gone down into the silence of the past is not known.

Search was made for the bones of the human beings whom the legend of the haunted rock describes as having been starved to death there, but they were not found.

It is assumed by botanists that this great rock, which rises over 700 feet from the surface of a desert of sand, protruded out of the ancient sea that covered this section of the world in the distant past, and that the flora is the same to-day as it was in those days, when the world was young and of which history has no account. Specimens, such as there were, were collected, but whether they belong to this day and age or to the realms of the prehistoric world is not known.

Worn Out?

Do you come to the close of the day thoroughly exhausted? Does this continue day after day, possibly week after week? Perhaps you are even too exhausted to sleep. Then something is wrong. All these things indicate that you are suffering from nervous exhaustion. Your nerves need feeding and your blood enriching.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil, with Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda, contains just the remedies to meet these wants. The cod-liver oil gives the needed strength, enriches the blood, feeds the nerves, and the hypophosphites give them tone and vigor. Be sure you get SCOTT'S Emulsion.
