LAST FOR 1,000 YEARS.

A Great Find of the Highly Prized Thessalian Marble.

The quarries from which the ancients obtained their highly-prized Thessalian or verd marble have been discovered and are again being worked by an English company, says the Philadelphia Record. The quarries, which have been lost for more than 1,000 years, are in the neighborhood of Larissa, in Thessaly, Greece. The ancient workings are very extensive, there being no fewer than ten quarries, each producing a somewhat different description of marble, proving without a doubt that every variety of this marble found in the ruined palaces and churches of Rome and Constantinople and likewise in all the mosques and museums of the world came originally from these quarries. In fact, the very quarry from which the famous monoliths of St. Sophia, Constantinople, were obtained can be identified with absolute certainty by the matrices from which they were extracted.

In modern times verd antio marble has only been obtainable by the destruction of some ancient work, and it has, naturally, commanded extraordinarily high prices. As a consequence, a number of ordinary modern greens of Greek, French, Italian and American origin have been described and sold as verd antique marble. No one, however, who is really acquainted with the distinctive character of the genuine material could be deceived by these inferior marbles. Thessalian green is easily distinguished from any other green marble by the following characteristics: It is a "breccia" of angular fragments of light and dark green, with pure statuary white, the whole being cemented together with a brighter green, while the snow-white patches usually have their edges tinted off with a delicate fibrous green, radiating to the center of the white. The cementing material is also of the same fibrous character.

QUEEN'S JUBILEE PENANCE.

Subjects Who Will Send Her Majesty Their Photographs.

Some weeks ago we protested strongly against the proposal that cards of congratulation should be showered upon the queen from subjects personally unknown to her majesty during the approaching celebration, says the London Times. We pointed out that the fatigues of this period for all members of the court will be quite trying enough without any addition to them in the shape of thousands, possibly millions, of extra letters being delivered at the royal residences and requiring attention. Since then it has been announced that all communications intended for her majesty in connection with the diamond jubilee must be forwarded through the secretary of state, but in spite of this a firm of photographers, showing more enterprise than good sense, revived the unfortunate suggestion mentioned above. They have sent us a specimen of a card they are issuing, bearing the words: "With heartfelt wishes for your most gracious majesty's royal subject," and with a space for the sender's photograph, which, of course, is to be taken by the firm. Perhaps the surest means of disuading any who might be inclined to make use of so unseasonable a form of felicitating her majesty on an event which she knows all her subjects are proud to point out that their cards are not at all likely to get any nearer the queen than the home office in Whitehall.

SUBDUED THE HORSE.

Gen. Grant as a Cadet Displayed Qualities Conspicuous in Later Days.

The following story was told by Col. Green, a classmate of Gen. U. S. Grant at West Point, says the American Horse Breeder:

"One day when the members of Grant's class were called out for drill on horseback there were not horses enough by one to go round. Grant was one of the shortest men in his class, consequently was on the extreme left of the company, and he was the one for whom there was no horse. The officer ordered a horse brought, which was done. The animal was a vicious brute, which had proved so unmanageable that he had been discarded. The officer in charge did not notice the horse until just as young Grant vaulted into the saddle, when, horror-stricken, he ordered him to dismount. The horse did his part to assist the rider to obey the order, but Grant drove his spurs into the sides of the infuriated, plunging, kicking, bolting brute, and guided him into an open field, where he gave such an exhibition of amateur horsemanship as no member of that class had ever before witnessed. Before the contest was ended the horse was thoroughly subdued and from that time became a useful, obedient animal, but it was always ridden by Grant."

Names of Cities.

Old Paris was formerly called by its Roman inhabitants Lutetia, meaning "Mudtown." London derives its name from the old fortified hill of the Britons, standing where St. Paul's cathedral now is. Dublin means the "black pool," and Liverpool "the pool of the living creatures." Rome is said to mean "the cross roads," and Berlin variously translated as meaning "the short lake," "the free and open place," "the river island" and "the marshy spot." Pernambuco means "the mouth of hell," Bombay "good boy," while Cairo is a corruption of "El Kahirah, the victorious." Ismahah is "the half of the world." Askqanah "the city of the star," Ingdad "the garden of justice," and Copenhagen "the merchants' harbor."

Utility of Mosquitoes.

The utility of the mosquito has been fully demonstrated by entomologists. Born and reared in pestiferous swamps, this insect does valuable work by consuming animal and vegetable matter which, if allowed to decompose, would still further poison the air.
