Discovered by Astronomer Lee.

Boston, Noy. 30 .- Astronomer discoveries of great importance are reported by Dr. T. J. J. Lee, who has charge of Lowell observatory, at Flagstaff, Ariz., established and maintained by Percival Lowell.

Dr. Lee, who is now in Boston, gave an interesting account of his recent discoveries through the twenty-four-inch telescope built by Allen Clark & Sons, which has been in use for eighteen months. He said since August, 1896, he has discovered about 560 new double stars and 700 objects unnoted by previous observers. Many of the stellar system discovered are large and brilliant, and thus possess the highest interest.

The discovery of the 500 new double stars is accounted the most important contribution to Southern astronomy since the survey of Sir John Hershel, sixty years ago. One of these stars has been found to revolve only once in five years and another in about sixteen years. Both have become of the highest interest to observers. -

A phenomena of general interest is the twinkling stars, so familiar on clear cold nights. This, Dr Lee says, is due to small waves or currents in the atmosphere about the size of an egg or sometimes even larger than a man's head. These little waves fill the air under certain conditions, as on a cold night, and imposing before the eye, dart the light from side to side, and in this way convert the light of the star into colors or extinguish it entirely. The appearance is similar to the light reflected from wavy, running water. Mr. Douglass discovered how to see these waves with a telescope and Dr. Lee brings proof that they cause the twinkling.

Other important discoveries have been made at the Lowell observatory.
