country would go up with a bound and always skin a rattler alive, because in stay up. This is no doubt alluring to killing them first you can hardly avoid some Americans. But in the end would it be a blessing to this country? We skins are becoming quite valuable of think not. The increased prices would late. The process I adopt is this: I be a benefit to some, but a hardship to place a forked stick over the reptile's others. We have consumers as well as head and hold it to the ground. Then, producers, in this country, and if the former receives more for what he has to sell, he would also pay more for what he has to buy. And after the great war the other hand I rip it open on the was over would come a period of depression, sooner or later, the steady consumption of American products would be interfered with, because of the disturbed industries and conditions. It is now generally recognized that action and reaction are equal.

America's position in event of great European war would be that of greatly divided, although the preponthe nations of western Europe, both because they are nearer to us geographically and nearer to us by race and blood. There would be plenty of work for the American navy, however, and to protect the rights of Americans abroad .-- Iowa State Register.

Then loosening the skin from the body at the tail I place my foot on the stub New Vogt Block, and yank the hide off in much the same way as you would skin an eel. I tackled a big one last summer, and before I could get control of its tail the reptile succeeded in coiling itself
