NEWS NOTES'

Wednesday.

William D. Carter, the pioneer printer of Portland is dead.

Offers have been made to patch up all factional differences between the two wings of the Republican party in Portland.

Fitzsimmons says that he will meet Corbett after Corbett has met Choyneki or Maher. Corbett says, "No, I will fight Fitzsimmons first."

Late arrivals from Alaska report that the richest strike that has yet been made was recently discovered on Hempker creek. Ordinarily it averages from $4 to $6 to the pan.

A report received from Portland states that this morning the Bailey Gatzert was in some manner caught in the draw of the steel bridge and a number of passengers thrown overboard and injured. Further particulars could not be learned.

The Turkish government, replying to the representations of Greece, has explained that the firing upon the Greek gunboat Actium by the Turks at Prevesa on Saturday last, as the vessel was leaving the gulf of Ambracia, was due to a misunderstanding.

Friedlander & Gottlob yesterday took formal possession of the Baldwin and California theaters in San Francisco, as successors of Al Hayman, who recently retired from the theatrical business in San Francisco. Friedlander & Gottlob now control all the first-class theaters of the Bay city.

Lord Salisbury, the British premier, has written to United States Ambassador Hay in response to America's latest proposal in the Behring sea controversy, by a request that Great Britain would enter into an agreement with the United States, Russia and Japan to stop sealing. Great Britain declines to enter into such an agreement.

Thursday.

Late reports from Dawson state that two fires occurred in that place recently, and that a large amount of provisions and liquor were destroyed.

George Sader, who lives alone near Weston, in Yamhill county, was found dead yesterday, with a knife in his breast. It is probably a case of suicide.

J. J. Tebow, a negro, was arrested in Boise, Idaho, last Sunday, and taken to Huntington, Or. He was charged with having committed rape on his 15-year-old stepdaughter. He says the whole affair is a "put-up job."

Major Charles Dick arrived at Columbus Wednesday to assume charge of Senator Hanna's personal interests in the senatorial election. Mr. Hanna is not expected before Sunday, and in the meantime Major Dick will shape affairs to combat as successfully as possible the opposition to his chief. Major Dick will have a corps of lieutenants to assist him, and the prospects are for a lively skirmish.

Thirty persons arrived at Seattle Wednesday from Dawson. They came to Dyea, where they took the steamer in different parties. The last party to leave Dawson left November 25th. All of them came up the frozen Yukon and out over Chilcoot pass. Concerning the food situation at Dawson, all say that there is more alarm felt over the situation outside than is felt by the people of Dawson, who, while they have no great surplus, have sufficient to last them until late in the spring. Whatever danger of starvation existed has been averted by the exodus of a large number of people from Dawson to Fort Yukon and the departure of a great many people up the river to the coast.

It has an estimated area of 12,000 square miles, and a population of 1,000,000 Chinese, exclusive of wild tribes in the interior.

"Just as Good" as Scott's and we sell it much cheaper," is a statement sometimes made by the druggist when Scott's Emulsion is called for. This shows that the druggists themselves regard of Cod-Liver Oil with Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda as the standard, and the purchaser who desires to procure the "standard" because he knows it has been of untold benefit, should not for one instant think of taking the risk of using some untried preparation. The substitution of something said to be "just as good" for a standard preparation twenty-five years on the market, should not be permitted by the intelligent purchaser.

Be sure you get SCOTT'S Emulsion. See that the man and fish are on the wrapper and $1.00, all druggists. SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists, New York.

His Duties Are to Protect Large Concerns from Imposition on the Part of Unknown Customers.

The functions of a credit man are not generally known to the public, but he is in many respects the most important person employed by a mercantile concern. Briefly, he is supposed to be informed concerning the commercial standing of every firm or individual with whom his own house has any dealings. He is a kind of walking "Bradstreet's," and the firm for which he works has the exclusive benefit of his investigations, his knowledge and his experience. It does not trust to him alone, of course, because in the case of a large house there would be rather more than he could attend to. The regular mercantile agencies are depended upon for a certain amount of information, usually that which concerns the oldest and richest corporations, about whose solvency there is commonly no question. The credit man may, however, if his employers suspect a necessity for it, be called upon to probe still further than the regular agencies go, in order to make assurance doubly sure.

When a would-be buyer from some remote part of the country presents himself to a firm to which he is entirely unknown, he is introduced at once to the credit man. The latter receives whatever credentials the stranger has to offer, and if he is satisfied that the house will run no risk in selling to him he states the fact, and his judgment is accepted. Various considerations determine the amount of security which a new customer is required to show, and not infrequently it is stipulated that he shall have a real estate backing which is known to be responsible. The credit man also figures out at once the largest amount of credit which can be granted to the new buyer, this being determined according to the figure at which he is rated.

Subsequently, as he runs up bills for goods, they all pass under the credit man's watchful eye, and if it is found that the customer is close upon his credit limit the last purchase is often held until it is proved to a certainty that its delivery will entail no loss to the firm. This process of keeping track of every buyer's limit imposes a never-ending task upon the credit man, and it is one which requires delicate handling, too. While great caution is necessary, there must be as few needless suspicions as possible, for these are often the means of driving away perfectly trustworthy customers, who feel themselves insulted by the reflection upon their financial methods.

In cases where there is good ground for believing that a customer will bear watching the credit man's investigations are very thorough. He inquires as to the private affairs of the buyer in question; finds out as nearly as possible the amount of his income, and how his money is invested, and keeps an eye as well upon the way in which he lives and spends. With every precaution, however, there are many losses, and it is the business of the annual convention of credit men to discover better ways each year of protecting mercantile interests.—N. Y. Tribune.

LAUNDRESS TOOK THE HINT.

Made a Buttonhole Large Enough for the Soldier's Improvised Button.

The private soldiers' washing at a home station is usually done by the married soldiers' wives, who are expected to sew on missing buttons and do general repairs. Patrick McGinnis, says the Troy Times, had a good deal of trouble with his laundress. Sunday after Sunday had his shirt come back with the collar button off or else hanging by a thread. He had spoken to her on the subject, and she had promised to see to it, but still the buttons were always missing. One Sunday he got out of patience when a missing button had made him late for church parade. "Bad luck to the woman!" he exclaimed. "Begorra, I'll give her a hint this time, anyhow!" He then took the lid of a tin blacking box about three inches in diameter, drilled two holes in it with a fork and sewed it on the shirt, which he sent to be washed. When his washing came back he found his laundress had taken the hint. She had made a buttonhole to fit it!
