THE COURT WAS THIRSTY.

So It Overruled the Supreme Court and Bought Itself a Drink. Just as Shakespeare has been accepted for years and years as the deciding umpire in most matters literary, so the Nebraska people had grown to look upon the supreme court of their state as the fountain head of wisdom, whose opinions could not be gainsaid. It is a way people have of regarding supreme courts in most states, as a matter of fact.

William Alstadt, a little German, whose readiest identification among his people was by the name of "Bismarck," was not one who cared over-much for tradition, and one summer day, after having been harangued by two lawyers until he was almost bursting with thirst, he made a decision which brought him fame. It does not make any special difference what was the question at issue. It was something about a dog. There was a sensible side to it and a technical side. The "technical" lawyer presented bushels and tons of authorities, and finally wound up with a triumphant declaration that the supreme court had decided on a similar case before and had decided his way.

When he sat down, Bismarck, with a sigh of relief, said: "I decide for de oder feller. Come on, boys, let's dake a drink."

"But," cried the defeated lawyer, in astonishment, "I tell you, your honor, that the supreme court has decided exactly opposite."

"My friend," said Bismarck, "in sheneral I haf some sympathies mit dot subreme court. But on a hot day, mit a fool of a lawyer dalkin' four hours, I am mofed to consult der good sense and shudgment of Bill Alstadt, J. P. Bill Alstadt is not only gonvined, but he is dirsty, and he decides dat if der subreme court of Nebraska vants to make a tam fool off itself in a question like dis it can do so, but dot aint binding on dis shustice shop. Der subreme court is hereby offeruled. Der plain-tiff gits der dog, and der court will now broceed to spend der fees in dis case in a way dot his shudicial thirst suggests, mit great gordiality. Come on, boys."

Thus it was that the supreme court was overruled, and as a plain statement of fact Justice Bill Alstadt's decision has always been followed in similar cases brought in Nebraska tribunals. In the same way the half true Shakespearean sucking dove theory is susceptible of revision or reversal.—Chicago Record.

BROCKEN'S ARMY'S SAIVE.

The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by Blakeley and Houghton, druggists.

SCROFULA.

One of America's most famous physicians says: "Scrofula is external consumption." Scrofulous children are often beautiful children, but they lack nerve force, strong bones, stout muscles and power to resist disease. For delicate children there is no remedy equal to of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda. It fills out the skin by putting good flesh beneath it. It makes the cheeks red by making rich blood. It creates an appetite for food and gives the body power enough to digest it. Be sure you get SCOTT'S Emulsion.

NOVEL WORK FOR WOMEN

Odd Occupations Followed by the Fair Sex in London.

There Are Dog Walkers and Portresses and Female Cabbies Are Looked for Next - New Fields of Labor.

It has been left to London to organize an institution that will give the new woman a decidedly new field. The women's institute promises to be the most unique institution that ever was created for the gentler sex. Among the chief occupations which those who place themselves under its protecting wings will be trained in are those of dog walker and hotel portress. The first of these callings is as novel as it is surprising. Certain families have dogs which need exercise. There are no grounds attached to the homes of these dog owners, and therefore the only way for the pets to enjoy fresh air is to be walked up and down the sidewalk, after the fashion of the dogs belonging to the flat dwellers in New York.

Now, the dog walker knows all about dogs. She calls at houses where she has learned canines are kept and presents a card, on which is printed in neat script: "Miss Dolly Periwinkle, Walker of Dogs."

To the person who receives the card the lady states that for so much per month she will guarantee to take a dog and trot him about the streets twice a day, each trip to consume 30 minutes. This gives the dog an outing of an hour a day, and as the charges rarely exceed three shillings a week it is believed the dog walker will find her occupation both profitable and pleasant, provided the dog permits it.

Some of the feminine dog walkers whom the women's institute has already placed have been bitten by ill-tempered charges. Such cases are all the more sorrowful, because the dog walker makes an agreement that if the dog bites her she will make no fuss about it, but accept the bite in the spirit in which it is offered.

The dog walker is required to give security for the animal she takes temporarily under her care, and this difficulty has been remedied by a bond given by the women's institute and indorsed by one or another of the patronesses, whose name is as good as gold. The pleasant-faced dog walkers have met with very good success, but those with apparently unkind dispositions have found their new profession very unprofitable.

Experience as hotel portresses on the part of the proteges of the women's institute have not as yet produced any great results. About the only class of women who can handle big trunks and matters of that sort never heard of the women's institute and were not particularly anxious to make its acquaintance. Where women have only found it necessary to carry hand baggage they have succeeded very well.

Other lines in which the proteges of the institute have begun to engage are billposting and paperhanging, in each of which they have achieved fairly excellent success.

It is the aim of the institute to furnish to women new fields to occupy. The members believe that woman should invade the domain of man to a far greater extent than heretofore, and that there are very many callings at which that type of woman with more strength than brains could make excellent livings, where now they are quite likely to lack the necessities of life.

The institute members claim that woman has proved to be a good farmer, and, that being the case, there is no reason why she should not succeed in those lighter occupations of man in the cities which call for no greater degree of strength in manual labor than is exercised by the women who farm.

The next step that the institute proposes to take is to secure a number of cabs and have them driven by women. The drivers are to wear divided skirts and must in every instance be young, strong and rather inclined to worldly wisdom.—N. Y. Herald.

BRAVE RYMEICKA DE NYSE.

How a New Utrecht Girl Saved the American Army.

Here is a good story that was enacted in 1776, but just discovered by the writer who, in his researches among the manuscripts of the Long Island Historical library and the New Utrecht library found in the daily reports of Col. Jaques Cropsey, reference to the following historic facts:

It was hard times in the colonies in August, 1776. Disaster had followed the fortunes of the American armies and this fact was well known to the English generals. Orders had been issued to give a decisive blow, which it was expected would annihilate the patriots.

Gen. Washington was called hurriedly to New York and calls were issued for recruits from all parts of the colonies, as it was expected a determined battle would be fought on the westerly end of Long Island. For weeks each side was gathering their cohorts for what was believed would be the final struggle. The English, under Lord Howe, brought their troops in vessels, which were anchored in Gravesend bay, and the arrival of additions to the fleet were of almost daily occurrence.

Gen. Washington was preparing for meeting the enemy and had in pursuance of a well arranged plan erected defenses extending from Wallabout to Bay Ridge.

During this time four farmers, Gerrit De Nyse, of King's Highway, Tunis Cropsey, Abram Bennett and Cornelius Lott, of Bay Ridge, owned a fishing net and boats and had a small building or hut on the Van Brunt farm, just where Avoca Villa now stands, in which they kept their nets and oars and had beds for use when they occasionally stayed over night. They fished nearly every day; they were patriots and with the arrival of the English fleet saw their opportunities gone for fishing, but not for long, because the English fleet needed fish and a squad of marines had soon found the owners and they were pressed into service to furnish fish for the fleet. They met at the hut and decided to be willing workers, but with the secret intent of making daily report of what they might see and hear to the officers in command of the patriot forces; and thus they fished, received the British gold, made themselves friendly to the English and each evening the result of their observations were given to Rymeicka De Nyse, the youngest daughter of Gerrit De Nyse, and she carried the news the next morning to Washington's headquarters.

This information was desirable and important goes without saying and the patriot fishermen were instructed to pursue their plan and on the first knowledge of a move on the part of the English they were to get word to Gen. Washington. The day the fact of a start was learned fishing had never been better and the largest load was taken to the admiral's ship and the finest fish were for his table. Every movement of the fishermen was delayed, to give all the time possible to look and talk, and when the quartet met at the hut at dusk it was with the satisfaction of having done a good day's work for the patriotic cause. They gave to Rymeicka full details of the British plans and no maiden ever bore a message of more import to the world than that carried that night by Rymeicka De Nyse to Gen. Washington. It gave him the knowledge that enabled him to retreat successfully and thus avoid the defeat that surely would have been the result had it not been for the faithful services of Gerrit De Nyse, Tunis Cropsey, Abram Bennett and Cornelius Lott, not forgetting Rymeicka De Nyse. The soil on which stands Avoca Villa should be a sacred spot to all lovers of the United States of America.

Rymeicka made the acquaintance of the officer of the guard at Gen. Washington's headquarters, Lieut. John Walker, of Rhode Island, to whom she was married at the close of the war. Their descendants are the Walkers, of Providence, R. I.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Housekeeping.

Recalling the much harder conditions of housekeeping of the times of our grandmothers and likewise of their mothers before them, we are impressed with the fact that the women who surmounted successfully so many obstacles must have been made of really tough fiber. The modern appliances which give us everything for our tables in highly condensed and beautiful forms, ready for use, with the minimum of preparation, were then unknown. They pounded the pepper and pulverized the sugar, and rolled the salt. So far from having electric lights to command at the touch of a mysterious knob, they had not even lucifer matches. The fire had to be kept in by strenuous care, and sometimes one went to her neighbor's to borrow a handful of fire with which to light her own. Nothing was easy. Everything required hard, persevering and unrelenting labor, so that we may well believe that the women of that elder day were far from being incapable. Incapable women may, for the brief seasons of youth, while the sea shell color tints the rounded cheek and the "beaute diable" beams in the bright eyes, win a passing tribute from thoughtless men. But the women who wear well must know how to meet emergencies, how to order and see their orders obeyed, how to hold themselves in calm composure, whatever tempests are abroad.—N. Y. Ledger.

Strayed.

Strayed from Dufur, Or., about the last of July, two bay horses, of about 1000 pounds weight, both geldings; one a light bay, branded S on right hip; the other a dark bay, branded HF (connected) on left shoulder. Information leading to the recovery of either, or both, of these horses will be rewarded by the owner. Rsv. JOHN EVANS, decl1-lm-ll Columbus, Wash.

The A. O. U. W. Installation.

The A. O. U. W. and Degree of Honor installation held last night, was attended by the lodge members and quite a number of invited guests. The program was well arranged and interesting throughout. The entertainment was opened by a quartet, after which the officers for the A. O. U. W. for the ensuing year were duly installed. The installation was followed by another quartet by Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Young, Dr. Eshelman and Mrs. Stephens. The officers for the Degree of Honor were then installed by the officials appointed by the grand lodge. Hazel Waud followed with a recitation. A vocal solo was then rendered by Dr. O. D. Doane in such an admirable manner that he was forced to respond to the hearty encore. By request, Mrs. Groat and Mrs. Jayne rendered a duet, which was followed by a character song by Hazel Waud. The musical part was finished by a quartet. Bountiful refreshments were served and the evening pleasure was concluded with a delightful dance, which lasted until midnight.

Bowling Tournament.

Four of the eight games to be played in the bowling tournament between the East End team and that of Moody's alley, were finished last night. The first two games were played on Phelps's alley, and the latter two on Moody's alley. The following is the totals for the four games:

Table with 2 columns: Game, Score. EAST END: 247, 245, 255, 283. MOODY'S: 220, 201, 318, 284.

Four more games are to be played to decide the tournament, and as the total is very close they promised to be interesting.

A GREAT FEAT.

The Mesa Encantada Explored at Last.

after Many Years of Conjecture the Truth Concerning the Famous Rock is Now Positively Known.

For the first time in the history of man the celebrated Mesa has been mounted. The honor belongs to Prof. William Libbey, of Princeton university, New Jersey, and the fact has been scientifically established that the summit is uninhabited, and, as far as the party could discover, has ever been. There were absolutely no traces of animal life.

It may be that new specimens of flora have been found that existed in the prehistoric world, but sufficient examination has not yet been made to determine this fact. The Mesa Encantada is said to be the only spot on the face of the globe where the flowers of the period of long ago can exist without the contamination and war of plant life with the world of the present day.

Prof. Libbey succeeded in making his much-talked-of ascent of the encantada a few days ago. The trip to the summit was fraught with great perils, and the result is of little value from an archaeological standpoint.

The party consisted of Prof. Libbey, H. L. Bridgeman, of Brooklyn, and the correspondent of the Times-Herald. Every preparation had been made for the ascent, there were great kites and balloons ready for use, but it was decided to throw a line across the top of the Mesa with a gun, borrowed for the purpose from the United States life-saving service.

The first shot was too low. The second, carrying a steel wire, went over the summit, but took two days to draw the cord which was attached to a longer rope over the rough, rocky surface of the spot described by Coronado in his report to the king of Spain nearly three centuries ago as being the strongest natural fortification in the known world.

When the ropes were made fast a block was arranged, and a great chain of boards, 20 feet across, was fastened to it. A huge rock was sent to the summit without tipping, and then Prof. Libbey made the ascent. It was dangerous, exceedingly so. As the professor came close to the summit he had to hang on by one hand, while with the other, he disengaged the ropes of the chair, which had caught in the rough rocks. The remainder of the party then made the ascent, and were assisted on the surface by the professor.

Next a great difficulty presented itself in the form of a gaping chasm. This was crossed on the ropes, and the ten acres of the surface of the rock were explored by the daring scientists.

They spent the entire day there, searching for the evidences of the village, said to have existed 500 years ago, but there was nothing to indicate that it ever had existed in reality. There were monuments of rock, such as the Indians built in the ages that have gone by, but that was all.

There were some pools of water that had collected, but whether they were worn by the action of small particles of rock carried by the winds or whether they were in reality constructed by the Acoma Indians in the centuries that had gone down into the silence of the past is not known.

Search was made for the bones of the human beings whom the legend of the haunted rock describes as having been starved to death there, but they were not found.

It is assumed by botanists that this great rock, which rises over 700 feet from the surface of a desert of sand, protruded out of the ancient sea that covered this section of the world in the distant past, and that the flora is the same today as it was in those days, when the world was young and of which history has no account. Specimens, such as there were, were collected, but whether they belong to this day and age or to the realms of the prehistoric world is not known.

This rock, enchanted or haunted, as it has been called by the Acoma Indians, has been the center of scientific interest for years. Numerous attempts have been made to mount it, only to be doomed to failure.

The legend of the Indians is that the summit of the rock was once reached by a natural ladder in a pillar. On this place the old and decrepit were kept to shield them from the attacks of hostile foes, while the men were in the valley at work. Once a great torrential rain came, like a cloudburst, and ate away the sandy foundations of the pillar, which fell, and the inhabitants on the rock, several hundred in number, starved to death.

It has even been asserted that the place was inhabited, and the ascent by the Libbey party was made to set at rest the rumors and determine once and for all whether or not the stories as old were true.—Chicago Times-Herald
