Last Night's Meeting.

A very enthusiastic audience met at the Methodist church last night. After an enjoyable and spirited song service, the meeting was opened by several impressive and earnest prayers. H. K. Hines, D. D., was in the city and delivered a very plain, practical and helpful sermon from the text "Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling." The thoughts suggested were equally applicable to saint and sinner. His first question was: "How many here tonight could say, 'I have so used the opportunities granted me as to make out of my life all that was possible?'" "What is salvation? Is it just to get inside heaven's gate at the last?" He defined salvation as revealed in God's word to consist first of justification by faith. "Therefore, being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord, Jesus Christ." Second, "The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirits that we are the children of God." Third, "The blood of Jesus Christ, His Son, cleanseth us from all sin." These three conditions constitute salvation. His exhortations to work and service were very convincing and instructive. At the close of the sermon a loving appeal was made by the pastor to the audience to unite in an after service. The response was very general.

Death of George Harrison.

At about 1:15 this morning George Harrison, who for some time past has been tending bar for Maetz & Pundt, passed away in his room at the rear of the saloon. He had been on a protracted spree, and was taken sick last Monday and last night passed away. The cause, as Dr. Hollister, his attending physician pronounced it, being heart-failure brought on by excessive drink. Harrison was about 42 years old, and came to this place in 1884 from Tower City, Dakota. He was born in New York state, but little or nothing can be learned concerning his family. He has been married but his wife and little daughter both are dead. While in this city he was in the restaurant business with Jack Donohoe for some time. He has also worked as a waiter in a number of different restaurants in this city, and of late years has tended bar. He has always gained and held the good will of all who knew him, and he did not seem to have an enemy. His remains were taken to Crandall & Burgett's, and as yet the time for the funeral has not been set.

Modern Treatment of Consumption

The latest work on the treatment of diseases, written by forty eminent American physicians, says: "Cod-liver oil has done more for the consumptive than all other remedies put together." A COMMON MISQUOTATION.

Our Orators Should Read the Declaration of Independence Again. Probably three out of four Fourth of July orators in their speeches this year quoted the Declaration of Independence as claiming that: "All men are created free and equal." The mistake has been common in the past and it is as prevalent now as ever. Presidents of the United States, members of congress, governors and a host of lesser lights have made the blunder, and to their number can be added editors and distinguished orators like the late Henry Ward Beecher. Nevertheless, the Declaration does not say that "all men are created free and equal," and it would not be true if it did. No person is created free. He or she is subject for years to the control of parents or guardians, and natural laws recognize this subjection as right. What the Declaration does say is that: "All men are created equal." There may be some dissent from that doctrine, as there is an evident difference among men in mental and physical endowment at birth. But while the Declaration of Independence is quoted as saying they are, it had better be quoted correctly.

Silk from Fish Eggs.

A French chemist has recently discovered that eggs of certain species of fish are enveloped in veritable silken cocoons. Since the learned Frenchman began his experiments in this line (in 1894) he has found seven different species of fish that produce eggs from which a fine quality of silk may be obtained.

COLLEGE HIPPODROMING.

The Show Business Carried to an Extreme by University Students. There is a sentiment rapidly spreading and taking root in the minds of the alumni of the different universities of this country antagonistic to the excessive amount of show business in which the students of American institutions of learning are permitted to indulge. The feeling, says the Buffalo Commercial, is growing that the only legitimate field for the exercise and exhibition of the physical, intellectual and musical accomplishments of these young men is to be found in the university athletic grounds, the university theaters and society halls. In other words, the alumni and a large body of thoughtful people not directly connected with the various seats of learning are coming to an agreement that the college youth is altogether too much in evidence outside of the college yards, either for his own good or the legitimate prestige of his particular alma mater. Of course, the conditions under which the rowing matches are held make the selection on a somewhat retired and neutral course like that at New London fit and proper; but the football, like the baseball matches, should be confined to college grounds, with the avowed intention of reducing the number and improving the character of the spectators, reducing the expenses and minimizing the publicity and spectacular features of the competitions. Another desirable result of this policy would be the elimination of most of the gambling and very demoralizing "sporting" elements that inevitably gather around events like the great football matches that fill the columns of the newspapers for several weeks every autumn. Certainly the students themselves would undergo less excitement and suffer less distraction from their legitimate college work if the scale on which their athletic rivalries are tested were effectively reduced. When these rivalries become matters of national concern they naturally tend to become dangerously intense and injurious to health and morals. We think this policy of restraint should also be applied to the practice that has now become universal among the colleges of sending out troupes of young men organized as glee, banjo and mandolin clubs to give public performances for money in the leading cities during the holiday recess. These lads travel about the country in special cars, give ten or fifteen concerts in public halls and undergo a succession of "social attentions" calculated to impair the constitutions of seasoned men, to say nothing of immature youths who are supposed to be resting and recuperating from the strain of three months of hard work at their lessons and lectures. Essentially their performances are not to be distinguished from the professional shows, and when they become an annual affair they are as tiresome as they are surely a tax on the good nature of the local alumni, besides being an unwholesome experience to those who take part in them. We have heard that the authorities at Harvard have served notice to the glee and banjo clubs of that university that their present tour is to be the last one. It is to be hoped that the report is well founded, and that the example will be followed elsewhere, as it deserves to be. Let the college youth attend their colleges and be required to attend more exclusively to their regular college business.

COUNTING OF THE VOTES.

In Recent Elections There Has Been Little Fraud in New York. The counting of votes has been in the past more fruitful of trickery and falsification than any other part of the election process. In 1893 the canvassers in certain districts reduced the matter to its lowest terms by simply reporting a unanimous vote on their side, and then going out to flip up their hats for the rest of the night. In the subsequent election competent and incorruptible men supervised the canvass so strictly that the percentage of fraud was so small, if any existed, as never to be heard of. This watching, says a writer in Century, at the count only prevented intentional lying, but saved accidental mistakes. In one case the board of inspectors confessed they did not know how to count the votes, and submitted entirely to the guidance of a well-informed watcher. The counting is done in public, and is often an interesting sight. Every organization and each candidate may send a representative to observe it, though nobody but the inspectors is permitted to touch the ballots. The straight tickets are first counted in tens by four men in succession, and a tally is kept by at least two assistants. Each name is credited with as many votes as there are tickets for his side. Then one inspector reads off of those tickets which are "split," or have pasters attached, or upon which names have been erased or new names written, and each candidate is credited with a vote every time his name appears. When this is taken up, and the sum of the votes for each candidate is ascertained.

A Good Standing Army.

The army of Japan, in the opinion of men versed in military affairs, is one of the best organized armies in the world. The rank and file are the descendants of the famous old Samurai—the sturdy men at arms who followed the fortunes of the early "daimins"—hereditary soldiers, imbued with all their warlike traditions. Members of the McKinley Club of The Dalles.
