REMARKABLE ENTERTAINING. The Host Furnished Everything for Hi

Guests. A young woman has confided to : writer in the New York Times a somewhat extraordinary account of the manner in which a wealthy and well-known New Yorker treats those who are invited to the house parties at his suburban home. She was informed by a note from her hostess that a carriage would call for her and her luggage at a certain hour to take her to the ferry, where Mr. X- would meet and take charge of her. At the ferry she found the entire house party, including matrons with their husbands, young men and maidens, assembled to be looked after by Mr. X-..... The valet checked their luggage, and in each instance a roundtrip ticket was returned with the checks. At the house, in each room the writing-desk was supplied not only with an ample stock of letter-paper, engraved with the estate name, but also with a box filled with postage stamps of various denominations, including special-delivery ones. A long-distance telephone, connecting with, among other places, the station telegraph office, made it possible to talk or wire all over the country and quite impossible to pay for the service. On the little guest card in each room, which gave the hours of meals and the schedule of mails and trains, was a little notice: "Visitors are kindly requested not to fee the servants." Finally, to cap the climax, on Sunday morning a maid brought to the young woman's door, on a tray which was loaded with similar missives, a small envelope which she proffered with the simple message: "For the church box." It contained money for the offertory plate and one of these envelopes was left with each

LI HUNG AND CHINA.

The Great Man's Relations with the Common People.

> Has a Very Difficult Position to Maintain and Is Too Progressive for the Slow-Going Celestials.

That was a strange collocation of a single day's dispatches which told how Li Hung Chang, upon his arrival at Peking, had been made minister of foreign affairs and had been reprimanded for omitting one or more of the proper forms in paying respects to the dowager empress. It was known before that the lady was a great stickler for etiquette, though in this she does not differ from some Christian sovereigns of her sex. She is a great stickler also for more substantial things and is believed to have done her full share toward getting the middle kingdom into its recent scrapes. The conjunction of reprimand and promotion would be very incredible anywhere else, but it is no more incredible in China than things hat have indubitably happened, as, for example, the quick succession of the privation of the yellow jacket and its restoration, followed by the bestowal of a confidential mission which anywhere else would denote a man whom the king delighted to honor.

Chinese politics. The more the s disclosed. The want of apprehension seems to be shared by men who have given their lives to understanding. For i generation or so Great Britain has een conciliating China and treating Japan with contempt, upon the theory hat China was a valuable ally against Russian aggression. When Great Britain had succeeded in alienating Japan 'n the supposed interest of China, and Japan had conquered China, it suddenv appears that it is Russia which gets he ultimate benefit of all the proceedloubt that the concession of a Chinese autlet for the Siberian railway has in 'act been made.

There is reason to doubt, however, that Li Hung Chang has been made minster of foreign affairs. In the first lace there is no such minister and, indeed, no such ministry; and in China that is rather more than a detail. Of the administrative boards which among them mismanage the empire, not one of them is specifically a department of foreign affairs, and if they were it would be a board and not an individual. "Abroad" is as much ignored in all Chiiese official arrangements as Mr. Mc-Kinley would like to see it in the industrial exchange, or Mr. Bryan in finance. In the next place the report ioes not take account of the dead weight of inertia that the mandarin class can and does oppose to any attempt to assimiliate their country to the rest of the world, or to put it in line with modern progress. The contempt of mere ignorance, such as the untutored Chinaman exhibits for foreigners, is nothing to the contempt of Chinamen tutored after the Chinese mode of education. Li Hung Chang is an energetic person, but he is quite helpless against his inert resistance. We may be quite sure that a Chinaman who believes that the isolation of China ought to be modified is looked upon either as a harmless visionary or dancerous radical. Li Hung Chang cannot be put in the former class, and so he must belong to the latter. In the course of his voyage around the world he has expressed himself in favor of fuller and freer trade with his own country, and this is to the randaries a sentiment clarming and evolutionary. Though the innovator is an old man in the scale of human life he is a mere boy in that of Chinese civillization and its representatives, who count themselves some 2,000 years older and consequently wiser than he.-Harper's Weekly.

Perhaps the greatest rarity turning up the past year was a pair of two-cent circular stamps of British Guiana, issued in 1850, and they are probably worth upward of $3,000. The stamps were first found by a woman residing in the colony, and were afterward acquired by a prominent Demerara collector. A few weeks ago they were purchased by one of the big London firms for a wealthy English collector, and may now be said to form the principal gem of this gentleman's magnificent collection.
