At Montreux the electric tramway gets its power in this way, and from the old Roman town of Vevey to the medieval castle of Chillon one may ride in a trolley car propelled by the power of an insignificant little stream which may or may not be noticed when climb-ing up the hillsides just above.

The capabilities of this general utilization of natural power are beginning to be understood everywhere, and with the appreciation of the possibilities of the best methods of long-distance transmission, the development of many mountain streams must surely come. There are innumerable streams which, while very small, are yet very high, and these can with comparatively little dif-ficulty be impounded and carried down many hundreds of feet, thus making up for their lack of volume by the great pressure readily obtainable, and, either by the use of electricity or compressed air, the power may be transmitted to many points of application with but little loss.

NO USE FOR LEATHER APRONS. Samantha Mann Declines to Trade Jelly

Cake for Cold Buckwheats. When the children used to go to Possum Walk schoolhouse the dinner hour was a time when they gathered together and compared the contents of their dinner baskets and traded with each other. Two doughnuts for a piece of pie, one cookie for a red apple, etc. Some of the scholars were children of the poorer class of tenant farmers and their baskets were not filled with anything like so appetizing an outfit as the baskets of the others. Mary Jane Spurling, for instance, used to come to school with buckwhea cakes for dinner. They were of the large kind, about 16 inches round and a quarter of an inch thick. They had been buttered thinly while hot, but the butter would melt quickly and the cakes would be as cold as tombstones by the noon hour.

Still, they were the best that Mary Jane had, and as the spirit of barter beat in her humble breast she essayed to exchange a couple of these pieces dc resistance to Samantha Mann for a slice of jelly cake. Samantha turned up her snub nose a trifle higher and said in a scornful tone:

"Oh, yes; now, Mary Jane Spurlin', you don't git me to trade any o' my nice jelly cake fur one o' your ole luther aprons

the New York Journal. They thought the earth was flat and were greatly puzzled to know how the same sun which plunged into the ocean at a fabulous distance in the west could reappear the next morning at an equally great distance in the east.

A number of remarkable theories were advanced and every one of them wrong. The old mythology asserted that after the sun had dipped in the western ocean at sunset (the Iberians and other ancient nations actually imagined that they could hear the hissing of the waters when the glowing globe was plunged therein) he was seized by Vulcan and placed in a golden goblet. This strange craft, with its astonishing cargo navigated the ocean by a northerly course, so as to reach the east again in time for suarise the following morning. Among the more sober physicists of old, as related by Aristotle, it was believed that in some manner the sun was conveyed by night across the northern regions and that darkness was due to lofty mountains, which screened off the sunbeams during the voyage.

A Compliment to His Host.

The German emperor is a master of little surprises quite other than those which occasionally fetch his troops out of bed in the middle of the night when they least expect it. While at Lowther castle, England, he took the op-portunity afforded by the absence of Lord Lonsdale to uppack a very fine marble bust of himself and put it in a position screened by the leaves of a large palm. The sudden unveiling and presentation was quite dramatic in its character and it need hardly be said that Lord Lonsdale was highly delighted with the carefully plauned compliment.

Mules for Dear Hunters. The proper beast for a grizzly bear hunter to ride is a good mule. Dr. W. F. Edgar, United States army, tells in Recreation why a mule is best. The doctor was wandering near a camp up in Washington state on a mule. He had his rifle with him, and, seeing a big bear in the trail, fired. The bear tumbled over and out of sight. It lookes! like a clean kill, and the doctor started toward the place, and was nearly in sight of the hollow where the bear had disappeared, when the bear climbed up over the edge and went for him. It was then that the mule was of the utmost service. The mule rose on its hind feet, turned sharply around, and headed for camp. A horse or a mustang wouldn't have been quick enough, the bear was so close, but all the hunter had to do was to hang on. The mulknew what to do without being told.
