THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

its Success-Number of New Books-The Entire List.

Ever since this library has been started a number of ladies, feeling a deep interest in anything that would add to the advancement of our city, have been making strenuous and successful efforts toward the enlarging and advancement of the public library. The large number of leading works, by the best authors, which they have already secured, is sufficient proof of the success they are having, and as the number of patrons is growing daily, there is no reason why still more flattering results may not be expected in the future.

It is a calamity, but nevertheless true, that a vast majority of people are not familiar with any of the works of the great English or American authors, and if they but realized the benefit they would derive from perusing good books, as well as the pleasure of so doing, they would not be slow in remedying their past negligence.

Although it has been running but short time as a public library, still a number of books have been added to the already well-selected list, and with the assistance of our townspeople this number will greatly increase. There are no charges for joining the library, and it costs but twenty-five cents a month to have the use of books. No one will miss so small an amount monthly, and at the same time these amounts put together will do much towards purchasing new books.

The following is a list of the books aleady in the library :

People outside of the city who come to town frequently can be members of the library as well as those living in the city. Many who live out of town, where amusements are much scarcer than they are here, have a great deal more time for reading, and this gives them the best possible opportunity to secure books at little cost.

At present the library is in Blakeley & Houghton's drugstore, and books are given out and received on Wednesday evenings from 7 to 9, and on Saturday afternoons from 1 to 5.

TOLD FOR WOMEN.

The bicycle wedding which recently electrified London, as the bride wore the regulation white satin and veil, has had z rival in the marriage of the young Parisian who went to the church in a carriage propelled by an electric motor. The woman who wants to make herself famous now seems to have little else left her than a balloon in which to tuck her happy lover, the minister and a couple

Mme. Adam, the prominent Parisian journalist, was driven into the work by the unhappiness of her first experience as a wife. Her parents married her when she was a girl of 15 to a notary in a provincial town. She left her hus-band, and with the aid of George Sand wrote herself into fame in Paris. Her second husband was a senator and left her a fortune at his death. This enabled her to found La Nouvelle Revue and to establish the salon to which all the celebrities of the French capital crowd when she receives. In trying to make a point against vegetarianism a member of the Ethnographical society in Paris read a paper before that body a short time ago in which he insisted that cannibals are exceedingly strong and vigorous, far exceeding in strength those tribes not addicted to such food. He said that the savages who abstained from human food rarely ate meat of any kind and were a puny lot. The most curious part of his argument was that the flesh of women was much more digestible and far more nutritious than that of men; many tribes recognize the fact and eat only women, until the supply gives out.

One would scarcely expect to find bicycles and a bicycle club in the heart of Africa and 600 miles from any railroad. One club in Buluwayo, Matabeleland, South Africa, is in a flourishing condition, having 25 members out of a population of 2,500.

An English eyeling club has offered a prize for the best design of a baggage car, adapted for the safe conveyance of bicycles, with the object of stirring up the railroad companies of England, so that they will provide proper accommodation for the wheels. The chief points which competitors are asked to keep in view are adaptability to the purposes of an ordinary baggage car and economy of space.

Nothing so promptly cuts short a congestion of the lungs, sore throat, or rheumatism as hot water, when applied early in the case and thoroughly. A proper towel folded several times and dipped in hot water, quickly wrung and applied over the site of toothache or neuralgia, will generally afford prompt relief.

Hot water taken freely half an hour before bedtime is an excellent cathartic in case of constipation, while it has a soothing effect upon the stomach and bowels.
