OBEYED THE JUDGE.

Got His Man and Brought Him to Town.

Among the wills that were probated the other day was that of a negro blacksmith named Austin Thompson, whose shop was on Sycamore street. There is a story connected with this man's name that is worth telling, says the Lexington

Just after the war old Benjamin F. Graves was county judge. He was an eccentric man, very peculiar in many ways, very honest and very positive. He ruled with a strong hand. One day Austin Thompson, who lived in the county, was brought before him charged with hog stealing. The meat was found upon his premises, but he had made no effort at concealment.

He acknowledged having the hog and killing it, but insisted that he bought the hog from another negro, who represented it as his own. Judge Graves inquired if he could "bring that other nigger into court." He was answered somewhat doubtfully. The old judge then answered to Austin that he "must bring that other nigger in, dead or alive. A day or two afterward Austin drove up with a cart to the judge's office, and entering informed his honor that he had his man.

"Bring him in," said the judge.

"I can't," said Austin; "he's dead." He had followed the old judge's instructions to the letter. The other negro refused to accompany Austin to town, and so Austin killed him.

Of course it caused an immense sensation in the community, and there was talk of impeaching the judge and of hanging Austin. But nothing after all was done about it, and the matter was allowed to drop.

BOVINE VALOR.

Two Cows Stormed a Barbed-Wire Fence to Rescue Their Calves.

The editor of the Condon (Ore.) Globe saw a deed of valor lately that was worth recording as well as seeing. A herd of cattle, among them two cows accompanied by their calves, were grazing in tall, dead grass when the calves became separated a little way from the rest of the cattle, and some wolves started in pursuit of them. After running about 200 yards the calves came to a high, five-wired, barbed-wire fence, and, being small, managed to get In this city, Wednesday, March 23d, through it. #### Lengthening the Eyes.

It is said that it is a common custom practiced among the Turks, who hold long eyes in such exalted esteem as to lengthen them by cutting the corners of the eyes. This is done very earlyat the age of two or three years-the outer corner being deftly slit with a lancet about the twelfth part of an inch. While the wound is healing the lids are drawn outward every day, and when it is quite curved the eye is still submitted to the drawing process every day for a long time, with the eventual result that it becomes long and narrow, and satisfies the taste of the "unspeakable Turk."

A CORPSE IN HIS BED.

Grewsome Experience of an Indianapolis Traveling Man. The story of the drummer who went to bed with the corpse is familiar to nearly every traveling man in Indianapolis, but it is not generally known that the hero of that experience lives in this town. It is a fact, nevertheless, and his name is H. D. Burgheim.

In 1877 Mr. Burgheim traveled for a wholesale millinery house located at Keokuk, In. Among the places he an visited was a village known as Milton, located on the C. & M. road. One day while passing through the place he saw one of the proprietors of the hotel standing on the depot platform and told him to reserve the room he usually occupied, as he would return on the next train and spend the night there. It was ten o'clock when he reached Milton on the back trip and the town was dark and ap-parently deserted. Mr. Burgheim experienced but little difficulty in reaching the hotel. The clerk had gone to bed and Mr. Burgheim knowing perfeetly well where the room was !ocated decided not to arouse him. He found the door unlocked and was somewhat surprised to find the room already occupied. The man was in bed and to all appearances sound asleep. Burgheim decided thatthe hotel must be crowded, and for that reason it had been found necessary to give him a roommate. He knew the man was all right or the landlord would not have put him in there, so he quietly removed his clothes and climbed into bed, carefully drawing the covers about him so as not to disturb his bed fellow. He was just getting comfortably fixed when the door opened and a young man and young woman entered. The man lighted the lamp and without even looking at the bed sat down on a chair and pulled the young woman onto his lap. There was billing and cooing, and kisses withont number. After watching the interesting scene for about five minutes Burgheim came to the conclusion that his bed fellow would enjoy it and he tried to arouse him. He punched him in the ribs two or three times, but the fellow never so much as grunted. He then reached over with the intention of taking him by the arm. In some manner his hand came in contact with the man's face, and it was as cold as ice. In an instant it flashed over Burgheim that he was in bed with a corpse. The very idea of the thing was horrible to contemplate, and without stopping to think he uttered a frightful yell and leaped out onto the floor. To say that he caused a commotion would be putting it mildly. The young couple nearly broke the door down in their baste to get out of the room, and they made a rush for the office pursued by Burg-heim, who was as hadly frightened as they were. The yells aroused everybefore the place quieted down again.

The trouble was caused by the proprietor of the hotel who had neglected to inform his partner that the room had .....Joseph McArthur been engaged by Burgheim. One of the guests of the house had died during the day, and the partner placed the body in the room Burghelm had engaged. The young people who were having such a nice time when Burgheim jumped from the bed had gone there for the purpose of sitting up with the corpse. They were under the impression that the man had suddenly come to life and of course Joseph Ladue, the famous trapper and they were badly frightened. The young bracers before he could summon up occupied another room and half a dozen people sat up with the corpse.-Indianapolis Sentinel.

TWO CROWNS OF IRON.

One Made of Gun Metal and One Carries a Nail from the Cross.

The crown of Roumania is composed of gun metal-made, in fact, out of a bit of old cannon captured at Plevna; that of Portugal has gems in it which have caused it to be valued at $5,000,000. The iron crown of Lombardy, which, by the by, is the oldest diadem in Europe, is only six inches in diameter. The question usually asked by those who behold it for the first time is: Where is the iron? For to all appearances the crown consists of a broad circle of gold ornamented by an enameling of flowers. This, however, is but the outward case-within the coronet rests the iron itself. It is fashioned out of one of the nails by which Christ was fastened to the cross. The crown now rests in the Cathedral of Monza, Italy, and is under the care of the monks of the establishment. These holy men call attention to the fact that while no attempt has ever been made to clean the baser metal, still there is no sign of rust upon it-a fact which con-
