A GHOST OF WILDCAT DAYS.

Once more the ghost of wildcat currency stalks abroad. It has entered the Georgia legislature in the form of a bill to test the constitutionality of the 10 per cent prohibitory tax on state bank paper money.

The National Democratic convention of 1892 pledged the Democracy to the repeal of the 10 per cent tax. The pledge could not have been more explicit.

The proposed test case will be made up undoubtedly, and in due time the ghost will leave Atlanta for Washington.

Every national banking association, state bank, or state banking association shall pay a tax of 10 per centum on the amount of notes of any person, or of any state bank, or state banking association, used for circulation and paid out by them.

The present supreme court consists of nine members, three only of whom are Democrats, Chief Justice Fuller and Justices Peckham and White.

THE O. R. & N. CO.

The announcement of the building of an O. R. & N. extension from Wallula to Lewiston, following the easy grades of the Snake river, is good news for Portland and Oregon.

The O. R. & N., for several years past, has shown a commendable spirit and its work has been of vast value to the people of the Inland Empire.

both itself and the country from which it draws its sustenance and existence. There is not a better nor a more popular railroad management than that of the O. R. & N. in the entire country.—East Oregonian.

FIFTY-SIXTH CONGRESS.

The importance of Republican control of the Fifty-Sixth congress is emphasized by the editorial comments of the Vicksburg Dispatch.

Fortunately, the country escaped this danger. Not one of the states mentioned will be doubtful in the next presidential election.

This is a story related by Admiral Schley about himself. The incident occurred when he was a small boy, of course: "I was returning from a fishing trip one day, when, looking down the lane, I saw a big mad bull making toward me, bellowing with fury and tossing the earth with his horns."

The gentlemen on the opposition benches who are criticising the operations of the Dingley law because, as they claim, it does not produce enough revenue, should not commit themselves too far.

There is likely to be some confusion over the Spanish peace commission unless the present flow of diplomacy is shut off.

GUARDING THE MINT.

Not Much Show for Burglarizing That Institution.

All Kinds of Precautions to Protect the Millions Upon Millions Piled in Uncle Sam's Vaults.

The doors of the mint are closed every week day promptly at four o'clock in the afternoon. After that hour no one but mint employees have any business within the walls which enclose so much money, and no one can either stay in or get in without a special permit from the superintendent.

Simultaneously with the closing of the doors at four o'clock the first shift of the night guard goes on duty. The shift is composed of the captain of the guard and 11 stalwart men.

From then on till midnight seven of the 11 guards patrol without cessation every floor of the inside of the mint, from the corridors of the gloomy vaults where, away down in the earth, are stored eighty-odd million dollars in silver and almost as much gold.

Promptly at midnight the second shift of the night guard puts in an appearance to relieve the early shift. It is also composed of a captain and 11 men, and they are split up, as the other squad, into inside and outside details.

The big revolvers are not the only weapons upon which the guards have to rely. On each side of the main corridor leading from the Chestnut street entrance stands a walnut case. Through the polished glass front of one is shown 20 Winchester rifles. The other contains as many ugly-looking carbines.

Superintendent Boyer and Assistant Custodian Ramsay both talked to the Inquirer reporter about the methods in use to protect the mint and its contents.

"I have been here for a good many years," the latter said, "and no such attempt has ever been made. It is practically impossible for anyone to break into the mint from the outside, and no one could secrete himself in the building during the hours when it is open to visitors and hope to avoid discovery.

In addition to the two shifts of night guards Superintendent Boyer and Assistant Custodian Ramsay have a habit of dropping in at the mint at odd hours of the night to see that everything is going on all right.

The mint is connected with the central telephone station, and should there be trouble the captain of the guard could communicate with police headquarters in a brief space of time.

"If you come across anybody who thinks he can get rich quickly by helping himself to our coin," remarked Superintendent Boyer in parting, "just advise him to think it over carefully first."
