

UNREST AT WARDNER

An Authority Subverted by the Riotous Miners.

FEDERAL TROOPS WILL BE NEEDED

Threats Made to Destroy the Bunker Hill Mill if It Should be Rebuilt.

WARDNER, Idaho, April 30.—The situation is serious today. Little bands of non-union men returning this morning from the hills to which they fled yesterday, were insulted by strikers in menacing manner, groups of whom are loafing around town elated over their victory.

All social events are called off, and the public school has been closed because of the excitement and animosities existing among the pupils. All kinds of business are absolutely paralyzed, and everything is at a standstill.

IN CHARGE OF MERRIAM.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—Brigadier-General Merriam, commanding the department of Colorado, has been ordered to Boise City to consult with the governor of Idaho regarding the necessity of United States troops at Wardner in consequence of the strike.

There are some companies in the vicinity of the strike, such as Fort Spokane, Helens, Mont., Vancouver and Boise, which can be ready in a very short time.

SOLDIERS UNDER ARMS.

A dispatch from San Francisco states that the troops at the Presidio are practically under arms and are ready at a moment's notice to start for the scene of the trouble at Wardner, Idaho, upon the call of Governor Steunenberg.

OREGON'S EARLY NEWSPAPERS

Concerning Printing in Our State's Industry—A Paper.

We publish below an interesting paper which is one of a number equally as instructive which have been read at the meetings of the Taine class recently.

The first printing press brought to Oregon was sent to the Sandwich Islands by the American board of foreign missions in 1819, and was used there for printing books in the Hawaiian language.

The first press was brought here for the benefit of the Indians, but how soon it was converted to the sole use of the white man; and it seems thus in all things pertaining to the Indians, for "Behind the square's light blue canoe."

The first newspaper in Oregon, and also the first on the Pacific coast, was the Oregon Spectator, published Feb. 5, 1848.

The Spectator was a semi-monthly journal of four pages, 15x11 inches in size, containing four columns each, and printed with clear type and in a tasteful style, by John Fleming, a practical printer and an immigrant of 1844.

Vault. Afterwards several editors were employed and removed in quick succession, for holding opinions adverse to the controlling power in the association.

The Oregonian was started in December, 1850, and the Oregon Statesman at Oregon City the March following.

The Oregonian was founded by T. J. Dryer, and was a weekly journal. Dryer brought an old Ramage press from San Francisco, with some second-hand material which he used for a few months.

The Statesman was founded by A. W. Stockwell and Henry Russell, of Massachusetts, with A. Bush as editor.

The Statesman was founded by A. W. Stockwell and Henry Russell, of Massachusetts, with A. Bush as editor.

In 1859 The Dalles Journal was founded by Captain Jordan, and was first published in the garrioon. It was bought by W. H. Newell in 1863, and was changed to the Mountaineer and moved to an office on the lot where Mrs. E. M. Wilson now lives.

The Engage Journal was started in 1863 by Kincaid, who still owns and edits it.

D. C. Ireland was the first editor of the old Astorian.

The first press was brought here for the benefit of the Indians, but how soon it was converted to the sole use of the white man; and it seems thus in all things pertaining to the Indians, for "Behind the square's light blue canoe."

Notice is hereby given that there will be an annual meeting of the stockholders of the Golden Eagle Mining Co., at the office of French & Co., bankers, Wednesday, May 31, 1899, at 7 o'clock p. m.

BEGGING BY LETTER.

American Millionaires Are Annoyed Through the Mails.

Many Such Missives Received Every Day Are Considerately Treated by Their Rich Recipients.

Rated in accordance with the number of begging letters received, Miss Helen Gould would probably be ranked first among the men and women of New York who measure their wealth by millions.

Miss Gould treats her begging mail with much more respect than do most persons of large wealth, for, unless engaged with other matters, she reads every letter asking for financial aid on the same day it is received.

Miss Gould's begging mail must call for a preposterous annual aggregate of charity nowadays, for it has almost doubled within the last six months, and the total asked for in gifts by letter in the year 1897 was footed up by her private secretary was a little more than $1,000,000 or about $2,740 a day.

How much she actually gives out for charity not even her private secretary knows, many benefactions being extended by Miss Gould in absolute secrecy.

Though richer than she by a goodly number of millions, her brother George does not receive nearly so many begging letters, nor does he open his hand so freely as she, yet his begging mail is something enormous, and the number of favorable responses is greater than is generally supposed.

How the younger of the two immensely rich Rockefeller brothers treats his begging mail has never leaked out, but John D. Rockefeller and his family are known to give it a great deal of their personal attention.

They look after it at breakfast time, when every member of the family present takes his share of the letters asking for favors, scans them, and later reads them aloud to the others.

A good proportion of all the Rockefeller letters are inconsequential, as a matter of course, and these receive little discussion. This is true also of the few which add threats to their pleadings, for the Rockefellers have long been case-hardened to this sort of epistle.

These always receive the most respectful consideration, often being discussed at length and sometimes almost formally, it being comparatively common, after a good deal has been said pro and con as to the merits of the appeal, for some member of the family to "move the request be granted" or "investigated" or "dropped."

Notwithstanding his uncharitable reputation, Uncle Russell Sage gets a big begging mail, though it is smaller than that received by Mrs. Sage. She told a friend one day that Mr. Sage receives more requests for favors on western railroads in which he is interested than for any other sort of benefaction, and that he is forever agreeing to haul freight free for some man who has suffered a loss of crops, or sending passes to some one who has made a mess of it in the west and wants to get east again, or helping to buy seed for a farmer who finds the world temporarily against him.

Still, the general impression that Mrs. Sage is more open-handed than her husband is undoubtedly correct, her benefactions, given entirely without ostentation, as a rule, aggregating many thousands of dollars a year.
