CHINAMEN OF DEWEY'S CREW

Can Not Set Foot on Land Which They Defended.

AUTHORITIES HAVE DECIDED

They Must Stay on Olympia While in New York Harbor—Dewey Wants Them Let In.

New York, Aug. 31.—A special to the Herald from Washington says: Under the Chinese exclusion law, some members of the crew of the Olympia, who served with such credit in the battle of Manila bay as to win special commendation from Admiral Dewey, in a letter to the navy department, may or may not be allowed to set foot on shore when his flagship reaches New York.

In the battle with the Spanish fleet, they were assigned to duty in passing ammunition and performing other duties connected with the fighting ship, and every one of them did his task well enough for Admiral Dewey, who even suggested that if possible they be admitted to American citizenship. His letter was referred to the treasury department. The secretary replied that although he greatly regretted the fact, there was no way in which the law could be waived. The Chinamen in the Olympia's crew could not be admitted to the United States unless they had been lawfully in this country at the time of their enlistment.

The law is mandatory upon the officials of the treasury department, and it will be the duty of the Collector of Customs Bidwell, at New York, to prevent the Chinese members of the Olympia's crew from leaving the ship while it is in New York harbor. Under the law, a naval vessel is part of the soil of the country, and technically, if any of them were enlisted in San Francisco, they have not been out of the United States, while serving on the Olympia. It is not probable, however, that any action would be taken by the treasury officials should the Chinamen be allowed to land on the supposition that they are legally entitled to reside in the United States.

Perished in a Flame.

YUMA, Ariz., Aug. 30.—The most disastrous fire in the history of Yuma broke out at 3 o'clock today in the second story of E. E. Seginetti's merchandise establishment, resulting in the loss of six lives and total destruction of the store building and stock of goods. The fire department, which responded promptly, was unable to cope with the flames, owing to the lack of apparatus. A crowd of men were carrying goods from the building when the second floor fell upon them, killing six, and more or less injuring many more.

The list of dead is: City Councilman H. F. Neahr, Rodolfo Wilson, James Tapia, Julian Preciado, R. R. Ivora and Richard Wilson. The loss is estimated at $150,000; insurance, $50,000.

The New Money Orders.

A new form of domestic money orders will be issued September 4th, and it is a great improvement over the old. It may be some weeks yet before any of the new form reach The Dalles, as the stock of old must be exhausted before new ones can be procured.

The dimensions of the order are those of the ordinary bank draft. This money order has two adjuncts: The advice, reproduced simultaneously with the money order through the use of carbonized paper, and the receipt, which latter is detachably a part of the advice, reproduced in the same manner from the money order. The liability to mistake is greatly lessened and time is saved by reproducing on the advice and receipt the essential particulars of the money order. The only writing on the order is the date, name of payee, sum in words, address of postmaster at receiving end, and name of postmaster at remitting end; this is all reproduced on the advice, which has of course different printed matter on it. On the money order is also written, on the right end, the sum in figures, which is reproduced on the advice blank, torn from it and given to remitter as receipt. It, the advice and the order, have the same number printed on them. The last thing to do is for the remitter to sign his name and the address of payee on the advice. A stub pen, which is stiff enough to produce a carbon copy, must be used in writing the money order.

A MIDNIGHT BELL

Which Will Ring Here Monday Night at the Vogt.

A most elaborate presentation will be given at the Vogt by a stupendous production of Hoyt's "A Midnight Bell," with all of the technic details and New England atmosphere which has made that the only melodramatic effort of Chas. Hoyt, one of the most clever plays written, wherein the plot is based upon the delimitation of character. "A Midnight Bell," which was written for Mr. L. R. Stockwell, received its first production in San Francisco some ten years ago, and scored an immense hit and had a long run. It was received during the holidays and more than duplicated its former success, the present production surpassing any ever given this beautiful comedy, in which a car of special scenery is used. It will be dressed in entirely new scenery, carefully following out the original models in every detail, casting it to the full strength of a company with several new faces added. L. R. Stockwell will appear in his created character of the "Deacon." "A Midnight Bell" is a mirth provoking picture of New England life; the scene of the play is a quiet village in northern New England, time of action present; the intent of the play is to picture certain striking features of rural life in Yankee land and certain types of character. The story revolves around the home of Squire Alcott, president of the bank. It had been robbed on the evening of his nomination to the council. He admitting that he was to his knowledge the last one to leave the bank, and that he had borrowed the keys of the safe from their casbler, Larabee, before the latter went home. Larabee was the real criminal, stole the bonds, etc., and concealed them inside of one of the church cushions. Evidence seemed so strong against the Squire that Larabee swore to a warrant accusing him of the robbery, and the Boston lawyer Alcott had engaged to ferret out the crime turns upon his own client. The Squire's nephew, Ned, is informed that his uncle is to be arrested and when the warrant is about to be served, to save his uncle, he falsely confesses to the crime, is arrested and taken to the Squire's house and locked up. Ned later escapes and is traced by his footmarks in the snow to the old school house where Nora, the teacher which he had taken into confidence in a love affair, taught school, and also where his girl, Annie, was attending. Ned tells Nora all, bids her not to betray his uncle and escapes to Boston on a passing train. Nora is discharged by the school committee for shielding Ned. The Parson takes her to his house, and the committee informs him at a choir rehearsal that he must give up the girl or the church and he resigns. Before the Deacon closes the church that night he goes into the belfry to oil the bell and is accidentally locked in. To arouse the neighbors he rings the bell, and several rushing in find Larabee taking the bonds from the cushion. All ends happily. Ned returns, marries Annie, and stands a hero of manhood and honor in the neighborhood. The attorney, during the action of the play, has found a girl that at the close of the piece he makes his own, and the parson, who is loved all the more by his flock for defending the girl, takes Nora to his heart as a woman worthy of his home. The management promises the school yard scene with its many sleds coasting down the hill, the church choir rehearsal and the sewing society, to reveal the true pictures of New England life, the most realistic ever attempted on any stage.
