HOW CHARLES W. BABCOCK Proprietor Lyceum Shell Oyster Parlor, of Rochester, N.Y. Obtained $2,000 Life Insurance Policy. My business as proprietor of the Lyceum Shell Oyster Parlor, 245 Main street, Rochester, N. Y., writes Mr. Charles W. Babcock, "was so confining that my lungs became affected. My doctor told me I'd have to leave the store and go to work at something outdoors. He said my lungs were in bad shape, and I knew it just as well as he did. The trouble had been growing on me for a long time. Like most other people, I tried to make myself believe the trouble was not in the lungs. I called it stomach trouble or nervous disorder, but I kept coughing, spitting and wasting away right along. I lost in weight, falling from 140 to 115 pounds. Somehow or other, I got hold of Acker's English Remedy for Throat and Lung Troubles, and after taking it according to directions, I was as well as any man in New York State. I was healthier and stronger than before I took the cold which came so near killing me. I now weigh 150 pounds—ten pounds more than ever. After recovering, I applied for a life insurance policy. When the doctor began examining me, I was afraid he would discover that my lungs had once been affected, but he didn't. I passed all right, and was pronounced in a first-class condition. If that isn't proof of the most positive kind that Acker's English Remedy is a great medicine, I don't know what you call proof. I give it my warmest endorsement. My address is given above. Anyone who wishes may write me personally about my case." Sold at 25c., 50c. and $1 a bottle, throughout the United States and Canada; and in England, at 1s., 2s., 3s., 4s., 6s. If you are not satisfied after buying, return the bottle to your druggist, and get your money back. We authorize the above guarantee. W. H. HOOKER & CO., Proprietors, New York. FELL FROM A TRESTLE.

Low Tillard, of Heppner, Injured Near Heppner Junction—Died Here. This morning about 4 o'clock Low Tillard, of Heppner, died at the T. Manilla home, as the result of a fall which occurred last night near Heppner Junction. An express held by Gunner Datta brought forth the following facts: Yesterday Mr. Tillard, who is a stockman, being at Heppner, started down to T. Manilla with two carloads of cattle. When the train reached Heppner Junction, or Willows, at about 7:30, the cars were detached and as Conductor H. W. Honey came in with the west-bound freight, he backed down, took the stock cars on and after going down to the water tank, continued on the trip, seeing no one who had charge of the stock. An extra freight came along about fifteen minutes later, and as they were crossing the trestle, about 400 feet east of the Junction, the brakeman heard someone falling below, and, on going down, found Mr. Tillard, who had fallen thirty feet. He was conscious, but seemed to be too much dazed to tell exactly how it happened, and he fell from the train, but unless he was walking on top of the train he would hardly have fallen below, so it is thought he started to walk back to the other section of the train and, it being dark, fell off the trestle. He was brought to the T. Manilla home in this city and Dr. H. Logan called, who is of the opinion that his back was broken. He lingered till 4 o'clock, asking in the meantime for his friends, John Patterson and John Bennett, of this place. Mr. Patterson did not reach last night, and Mr. Bennett did not reach him before he died. He was a man of about 45 years, unmarried, and has lived in Heppner for a number of years, at one time keeping the Central hotel and a saloon there. He has two brothers, William and Sam Tillard, who are business men there. He also leaves a mother, father, and three sisters. He was a man well liked by his fellow citizens, and his death will be a great shock. Telephone messages were sent to his friends there, who requested that his remains be embalmed and sent to Heppner on No. 4 this afternoon. They were therefore taken to Mitchell's undertaking parlors, where an inquest was held and the body prepared for shipment. It is thought relatives will arrive on No. 1 to accompany them. The coroner's verdict was as follows: "We, the jury impaneled by W. H. Butts, coroner of Wasco county, Or., to inquire into the cause of the death of an unknown man, whose body now lies before us, find as follows: That said deceased, whose name is Low Tillard, came to his death by falling off a trestle about 400 feet east of Heppner Junction, Or., on Wednesday, the 4th day of October, 1899, about 7:30 p. m. That his home is at Heppner and his general description as follows: Height, about 5 feet 10 inches; weight about 200 pounds; sandy complexion, and of the age of about 50 years. C. F. STEPHENS, C. E. HAYWARD, B. H. THURNTON, C. S. SMITH, C. V. CHAMPLIN, GEO. H. DEFEY.

THE HALF WAS NOT TOLD. So Mr. Bonney Makes His Terrible Confession. THE DALLES, Or., Oct. 4. EDITOR CHRONICLE: Now, you have got me into trouble sore enough. When you requested that I give my personal views on the interview that appeared in the Oregonian from the Hon. Secretary of Agriculture, I had no idea of getting into a controversy with any more august or dignified person than the Hon. Secretary. Now, I find myself attacked by the Hon. M. J. Anderson, of Dufor, secretary of the W. C. Forest Protective Association, and I hate the situation exceedingly, for Milt is a blacksmith and hits right out from the shoulder, and gives his facts with a directness that makes one shudder to think of. But I was with the said band of sheep myself on that memorable tramp and must have done a good deal of sneaking mischief. But, Mr. Editor, the half has never been told. I herded the sheep a day and a half in Dave Nelson's field and destroyed part of his orchard and a hay stack, and got into his ladder besides, and it cost me $9.15 to settle the damages. Then, after that, I drove them through McIntosh's pasture and Robt. Cooper's orchard and melon patch, destroying a big water melon, and had to pay twenty-five cents to get away from there. Then I drove them through Bill Taylor's blackberry patch and Marshall Hill's cornfield, but as they were not at home the sheep got a good feed and no damages were assessed. But, Mr. Editor, I want you to be careful and not let Mr. Anderson know of this, as he might print it, and if he did print it over his own signature somebody might believe it; there is no telling how much trouble might result. And, really, Mr. Editor, every poor sheep man has trouble enough these days. But keep mum, that's the word. Seriously, now, as Mr. Anderson and myself are the best of friends, so far as I know, and as Friend Charley Balch

will has a good big pasture and a good deal of grain in it, and did not seem very mad when I saw him last; and as the streams all have a little water, and a few trees are well left in the forests, I guess we will all live over it and have many prosperous years yet. I think Mr. Anderson and my friends in Dufor all know that if I really thought the water supply to be in danger, I would be the very first man to kick, for I think I might have land every year that any other one man in Wasco county. A. A. BONNEY. "Strong" Brass Buttons Got. The lad for brass buttons and other accessories from the soldier boys had such a rage during the time when the volunteers were bound for Manila that it became positively disgusting and many young ladies forgot manners and everything else but "buttons" in their desire to obtain accessories. It would naturally be supposed that the rage had subsided, but the following story which comes from Spokane, is proof to the contrary, and shows to what an extent that intolerance is carried on: When the Dakota volunteers scrambled off the train at the Northern Pacific depot at that place Friday they were besieged by a crowd of high school girls who demanded buttons from the blue uniforms as souvenirs. The soldiers for the most part submitted, cheerfully giving up Uncle Sam's brass civiliets in exchange for hat pins, neckties and other articles of feminine apparel. Soon the soldiers' buttons were denuded of every lastening. Suddenly a tall blonde girl rushed through the depot to the platform. She was late. The buttons were all gone and her friends proudly exhibited their trophies. But the blonde girl had come for buttons and buttons she would have. Down at the end of the platform she espied a colored man standing near the train. He was respectful in complete uniform of blue and every button was in place. "Just because he is a negro soldier he has been overlooked," thought the high school blonde. "Well, I don't care for color—I want buttons." A moment later the unsuspecting victim was accosted by the blonde girl, who held an open penknife in her hand. "Won't you give me some of your buttons?" she sweetly asked, as she reached for the top one and began to saw the thread with the knife blade. "Heck, boss, miss—don't do dat. It's up to de rules. I ain't—"
