Doctors Can't Cure It!

Contagious blood poison is absolutely beyond the skill of the doctors. They may dose a patient for years on their mercurial and potash remedies, but he will never be rid of the disease; on the other hand, his condition will grow steadily worse. S. S. S. is the only cure for this terrible affliction, because it is the only remedy which goes direct to the cause of the disease and forces it from the system.

I was afflicted with Blood Poison, and the best doctors did me no good, though I took h Blood Poison, and the Ro good, though I took their freatment faith fully. In fact, I seemed to get worse all the while. I took almost very so-called blood remedy, but they did not seem to reach the discase, and had no effect whatever. Once more the merry note of the wedding bell has chimed out in Dufor, calling two from the lonely paths of singleness to walk together in the untried road of married life. The little bark was beautifully launched on Oct. 11, -1899, at 3 p. m. at the home of the bride's parents, Rev. O. V. White officiating. At the sound of a wedding march, Mr. Harry R. Richards and Miss Jetta Inez Starr entered the parlor where the waiting guests were assembled. Amid a solemn silence the words were pronounced which declared them husband and wife. The congratulations and words of advice were pointed and many of them well worth remem-

The bride was quite bewitching in a cream satin dress, prettily trimmed with chiffon.

Among the wedding presents were two beautiful pictures, a set of tableware and several valuable pieces of china and silver ware.

The dining room door was then open. The bride and groom at the head of the table with their friends about them, were soon busily engaged in partaking of the bountiful supply of daintily served chicken, coffee, cake, ice cream and other eatables which loaded the table.

It is peculiar how many different ways there are that infections diseases are nourished. Receiving contagion in letters or by direct communication is a common occurrence, but it seems almost ridiculous that microbes can be bred in telephones. Strange Story of the Origin of Whisky Gap, Wyoming.

Drinking the Water of Its Spring Created Trouble Amongst Some Soldiers Who Were in Camp There.

One of the historic places in the west is Whisky Gap, Wyo. The old-time dwellers of mountain and plain, the men who "fought Indians and hunted buffalo out west" during the overland trail days of the early '60s, shrugged their shoulders with satisfaction at the mention of Whisky Gap for nearly 40 years. This is the place, according to their belief, where real "fire water" gushed up out of the rocks in a beautiful mountain spring to quench the thirst of a whole company of Uncle Sam's trained Indian fighters. "It was nothing but pure spring water," they say, "A veritable fountain of youth." Whisky Gap received its name in 1862, during the building of the overland stage route from Denver to Salt Lake City and the Pacific coast.

It happened in this way: The people of Denver had long been working to secure the regular overland stage route, then connecting the east and west. In 1862 "Ben" Holliday, a veteran stage man, became the proprietor of the great overland line, and he agreed upon a route running through Denver to the AND OTHER GREAT ATTRACTIONS west. He decided to discontinue that part of the road running up the North Platte and the Sweetwater rivers, and across South Pass, Wyo. The many Indian difficulties experienced on this route was the inducement to abandon The new trail led by way of Julesburg, Col., to Denver, and on over the established wagon road to Fort Lupton and north across the Laramie plains, then due west through Bridge eater Pass, Wyo., joining the old trail leading across the country to the Pacific coast. The change was made during the summer of 1862. All the rolling stock, horses and other property of the company were gathered at the station just above Devil's Gate, in central Wyoming. Company A of the Eleventh Ohio cavalry, with Maj. O'Farrell in command, was the detailed escort at

During the first day the long train of coaches, wagons, horses and mules made 11 miles from the atation where the property had been gathered. The route chosen was directly south from the Sweetwater river. The camp seceted was in a gap in the mauntains, where there was a fine spring and plenty of wood for cooking purposes. Short ly after going into camp the major di covered that quite a number of his soldiers were intoxicated, and he at one sent for Lieut, W. H. Brown, who was officer of the day, and informed him of the condition of many of the men, and gave it as his opinion that some one was selling whisky in the camp. The command was doing escort duty not only for stage, stock and stores, but also a number of emigrants who had search all wagons, and if he should disempty the contents on the groun This was done, but it chanced that the spot where the whisky was emptied was just above the spring, and the fiery liquid went pouring down into the water supply of the camp. The soldiers saw what was going on and they rushed forward with cups, canteens, buckets and camp kettles to save what they could of the coveted "spirits." Many a man stopped over the spring and drank almost without breathing until he was drunk. A half hour later the intoxicant was showing its effect pretty generally around the camp, and soon but few sober men could be found. One soldier who had succeeded in getting a quarters tent, assuring his command ing officer, with maudlin mein many a "hie," that that was the finest spring he had ever seen and the very best water he had ever tasted,

Maj. O'Farrell was apprehending an attack from the Indians that night, and the condition of his men fairly disheartened him. He saw at a glance that even a small band of savages could make a successful raid on his camp; consequently the sober and less intoxicated men were kept on the alert that night, Fortunately no Indians put in an appearance, and by morning the debauched men had slept off their intoxi-

Thus the gap in the mountains where the camp was made received the name the favorite camping place for the more credulous of the old freighters and emigrants of the "trail days," but the little spring was never a "fountain of youth," as it had been in the old days, when to quench the thirst of a company of United States soldiers.—Chicago Times-Herald.
