The parliamentary secretary of the war office, Mr. Wyndham, in announcing the death of General Symons said: "The news was considerably sent to General White by General Joubert, which conveys the impression that General Yule had to leave his wounded at Dundee. We hope to have shortly full information on the disposition made by General Yule for his wounded before leaving. "The house," he added "will be glad to know that we have a further report from Mafeking, which was all right October 21. As the establishment there of the Nineteenth hussars was complete, there is no explanation why the infantry officers fell into the enemy's hands. "Orders were issued today for an additional 5000 troops to sail for South Africa between November 4 and November 18. The war office received the following dispatch from General White: "Ladysmith, Oct. 26.—12:40 p. m.—General Yule's column just marched in here after a very hard march during the night of exceptionally heavy rain. The men, though done up, are in good spirits and only want rest. The enemy did not molest them."

Sounds Bad For Britons. LONDON, Oct. 26.—A belated dispatch from Glencoe camp admits that very few Boers' dead and wounded were found on the field after the battle in that vicinity.
