Asthma's Clutch

The sufferer from Asthma is constantly wheezing, gasping, hacking and clearing the throat. When a storm approaches, when there is a cloud of dust, when a room is being swept, or when there is a bad odor, breathing becomes most difficult. Often it seems as though someone was clutching the sufferer by the throat with a terrible grasp. The choking sensation is almost unbearable. The trouble sometimes lasts only a few minutes and again hangs on for many days. There is only one safe thing to do, and that is take Acker's English Remedy for Throat and Lung Troubles. Just what this medicine accomplishes is shown by the following letter from Mr. N. H. Andrews, a prominent resident of Springfield, Ohio, who writes:—

"W. H. Hooker & Co., New York:—Gentlemen:—It affords me a great pleasure to assure you that I have received both immediate and permanent relief from throat, bronchial and asthmatic troubles by using Acker's English Remedy, taken strictly according to directions. It is a blessing to humanity."

Sold at 50c, 60c and $1 a bottle, throughout the United States and Canada; and in England, at 2s. 6d., 3s. 6d. and 4s. 6d. If you are not satisfied after trying, return the bottle to your druggist and get your money back.

We authorize the above guarantees.

They Rang Off.

Some queer conversations take place over the telephone, and complications arise which are extremely amusing. For instance the following misunderstanding took place over a city vote not long since:

"Are you there?"

"Yes."

"Who are you, please?"

"Watt."

"What's your name please?"

"What's my name."

"Yes, what's your name?"

"I say my name is Watt. You're Jones?"

"No, I'm Knott."

"Will you tell me your name?"

"Will Knott."

"Why won't you?"

"I say my name is William Knott."

"Oh, I beg your pardon."

"Then you'll be in this afternoon, if I come around, Watt?"

"Certainly, Knott."

Do you wonder they rang off in despair and disgust?

Tribute to a Remarkable Man.

The following tribute to the late editor of the Youth's Companion, clipped from its columns, may be of interest to the few who have not access to that paper:

"DANIEL SHARP FORD.

"The readers of The Companion have lost an old and true friend in the death of the great and good man whose name heads this article. Although most of them never before saw the name—for it is now printed in The Companion for the first time—he has been for forty-two years its editor-in-chief and publisher.

"Mr. Ford died at his home in Boston on the morning of December 24, 1899, in the seventy-eighth year of his age. We must postpone to another occasion a full account of one of the most active and beneficent lives with which the good God has blessed this generation of men.

"At this time we only record the death of one who was beloved and revered by all who were associated with him, in the conduct of this paper, in the countless enterprises for the relief and well-being of others in which his soul delighted, and in all the relations of life.

"The Companion was dearer to him than the apple of his eye. He had caused it to grow from a local paper of narrow scope and limited circulation to the great institution it is. He watched over it with more than the jealous care of a mother for a darling daughter. He laid its foundation deep. He built it to endure. Two thoughts were ever in his mind—to keep The Companion pure and wholesome, and to organize it in every department so that, when he should be taken, the structure, to the building of which he gave his life, should stand secure and unchanged.

"Gifted with a broad mind, a quick intuition, a conscience as pure as a child's, a sympathy that embraced every living creature, and an unwearying industry, he has left behind him a monument which all the world can see and admire, but in the hearts of his associates he has left a void which nothing can fill.

READING ROOM QUESTION.

A Feasible Plan Which Should Be Carried Out.

The report of the public library for the past year, which was published yesterday, is encouraging not only to those interested in its work, but to all who desire to see such institutions flourish in our city. This, however, gives rise to a question which was agitated by a correspondent in the CHRONICLE some weeks since—that of a public reading room.

If such an institution was ever needed in a place, The Dalles is in need of it at present. Where in the city can a stranger find a place where an evening can be spent outside of a saloon? True, the Commercial Club furnishes a splendid place for its members and their friends to while the hours away; but what of those who have no acquaintances whatever here? What of the young men from the country who are compelled to stand around on the street corners or take the only alternative—the place where the doors are always open and extending a cordial greeting. While our churches and societies are agitating the temperance question, would it not be well to consider that they are their brothers' keeper, and should at least extend to him a helping hand in this particular case?

Adjoining the library to the east is a large room, well lighted, and which, with some improvements, would be just the place for a public reading room. We have no doubt that the use of the library books would be donated, and, with the exception of the few months of extreme cold weather, the room could be heated from the library room. It would be necessary to fit it up in a comfortable manner, provide periodicals and a librarian for the afternoon and evening, at least, it hardly being necessary to keep open during the morning hours.

But, the question arises how are these expenses to be met? While we realize that the church societies are already burdened to keep up the finances of their various denominations, surely they could at least give one afternoon in a month which will be devoted to the interest of such a noble work. Then let the lodges of our city each give the proceeds of one of the entertainments so frequently enjoyed by them to this cause. Beside this, surely the young people would willingly give a concert, play, or entertainment of some description which proceeds would be used for that fund. And by such means more than enough could be raised to meet the small requirements.

What is needed is for the ladies of the churches to club together, talk the matter over and see what can be done along this line, and if an organization is perfected, appoint a committee each month to overlook the business connected therewith.

A SURE CURE FOR CROUP.

Twenty-five Years' Constant Use Without a Failure.

The first indication of croup is hoarseness, and in a child subject to the disease it may be taken as a sure sign of the approach of an attack. Following this hoarseness is a peculiar rough cough. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is given as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even after the croupy cough appears, it will prevent the attack. It is used in many thousands of homes in this broad land and never disappoints the anxious mothers. We have yet to learn of a single instance in which it has not proved effectual. No other preparation can show such a record—twenty-five years' constant use without a failure. For sale by Blakeley & Houghton.

Robbed the Grave.

A startling incident, of which Mr. John Oliver of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: "I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite—gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately, a friend advised 'Electric Bitters,' and to my great joy and surprise, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they saved my life, and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50c, guaranteed, at Blakeley & Houghton's drug store.
