Three weeks ago there were thirtyfive cases of the unnamed disease in Moro-now there are but five; thanks to the board of health, which in spite of all obstacles, have unremittingly toiled to stamp out the disease. The highest number of cases at any one time was fifty-eight. No deaths have occurred from it. We cannot blame our sister city for its alarm at the situation, but it seems safe enough now to raise the embargo against Moro.—Observer.

Mr. Max Shillock, who has long been connected with the Portland Telegram and who earned the reputation of being one of the ablest writers on the staff of that paper, is to be hereafter, or for a time at least, located at Sumpter and Granite. Mr. Shillock carries with bim credentials appointing him as correspondent for the Telegram, Spokane-Review and Associated Press and we may now expect reliable reports from the mining sections which he will have occasion to investigate. Appearances more than often deceive, as it seems will be proven in the case of Edwards, or Simmons, who was arrested for forgery last week and given thirty days in the county jail for larceny. As was said by a minister in a city pulpit last night, it is almost beyond the ken of those who deal with them nowadays to understand how it is possible for so many young men to be such hardened criminals. Simmons, it now appears, is among that number, as the following letter received by the marshal indicates:
