BRYAN'S RAVIN'.

Once upon a midnight dreary, As I pendered weak and weary, In a state of angust stuper on my quiet chambe

While I drowsed there, on the night air Came a voice from out the somewhere, Penetrating, silence breaking. Shaking air any chamber floor. Twas the Bryan, William Bryan, Shaking thus my chamber floor. Talking, talking, evermore.

"Bryan," said I, quite emphatic,
"Populist or Dumociatic,
Whether fate or silver miners sent thee to my chamber floor,
Dost thou think that I am dannted
At the red flag ever fininted
O'er this land by silver haunted?
Tell me, truly, I implore,
is there money in it for you?
Tell me, tell me, I implore.

Bryan, 's said I, 'thing of talking,
Who through East and West is stalking,
By the rhetoric thou lovest, by the talk thou
dost adore;
Tell this land with parties laden
If within that distant aidenn which you promise us, prosperity, like silver,
is galore?
Will our money be more plenty:
Will we work eight hours or twenty?
Tell us, Bryan, William Bryan,
Will our hard times then be o'er?"
Did he answer? Nevermore.

And the Bryan, never weary,
Through the day and darkness dreary,
Still is talking, talking nonsense never nation
heard before:
Pours his fallacies outflowing
As he travels excitward going,
O'er the waste of Western prairies
To the wave washed Jersey shore
In a grand triumphal progress
To the open White House door,
Will he enter? Nevermore.

It is so near the presidential election that Democracy is looking for campaign material and witting to pick up anything to howl about, which accounts for the howl about the Puerto Rico bill. They have only lately discovered where the constitution was violated by the tariff, and two years ago permitted Hawaii to be annexed, to pay the full tariff on all business with the United States, and now go frantic when it is proposed to charge Puerto Rico fifteen per cent of the amount; that, too, when all collections go back to Puerto Rico to pay the lands lie idle and unoccupied. As patexpense of running the island, and the ents do not issue for twenty years, they arrangement is only temporary. "Consistency is a jewel" that Democracy does not take much stock in.

Although this exceeds the 50 cents. average for an entire session of congress, it is evident that Mr. McBride does not intend to stop here, for he has in the last two weeks obtained favorable re-opposition of the house conference. Senator McBride has taken a great deal of interest in Pettigrew's senate bill 2746, to aid certain states to support schools of mines. The bill provides that each state shall receive one half of all money paid the United States for mineral lands, in such states, provided the amount so paid in any year shall not exceed the amount annually expended by the state for the support of a school of mines. The senator says this will aid the University of Oregon, which now has a School of Mines, and which will be entitled to the money coming to the state under the bill. He supported the grounds. Tongue has secured a favorable report from Public Lands committee, of which he is a member, in favor of his resolution to reserve 249 [square miles of the Cascade range as the "Crater Lake Reservation," where game and fish will be preserved and timber protected, and Oregon will have, or the United States will have, one of the most delightful mountain parks in all the world.

The committee on Public Lands has also reported in favor of issuing patents to lands owned by decrased Indians on the Siletz reservation, as per bill Mr. Tongue introduced. Its passage will open considerable good land to settlement, as many Indians have died whose will remain so unoccupied for many years to come, unless they can be put on sale, and make homes for newcomers.

In war time long ago Henry Judge, of Ashland, fornished saddles to Oregon Volunteers at the request of Col. Maury, the committee on public lands, he has but was never paid.
