COURTESY ON A STREET CAR.

How an Inquisitive Woman Managed to Read the Paper of a Stranger.

A big, fine looking man sat in the corner of a South side car reading his newspaper. Next to him sat a little woman in an up-to-date freek. She had a box of camly in one hand and an opera libretto in the other. She tried to get a newspaper from a boy who came through the car, but the conductor broke up the transaction and, seizing the small newsdealer, put him down on the pavement. Then the pretty woman in the up-to-date frock paid her fare in pennies, and smiled, says the Chicago Inter Ocean.

The big man's newspaper was spread out before her eyes, and she glanced at the headlines. Then she read a half column about a thrilling rescue of a typewriter girl by a gallant fireman. She glanced sideways at the big man. Apparently he was Roy Emerson taking no notice. She began on a Pearl Grimes taking no notice. She began on a story of burglars in a South side flat, how they bound and gagged a woman, stole her sealskin sack, and-"Oh, oh! the horrid things!" she exclaimed, excitedly. The big man looked around inquiringly, and then, quite as a matter of course, he said

"Have you finished this page, madam? If so, let us turn to the stock reports and the society news."

The Most Primitive Marsupial. In the Quarterly Journal of Micro-scopical Science Mr. Hill, of Sydney, gives an account of his important researches into the embryology of marsupials. He has discovered the existence of a distinct placenta in the Bandicoots, and infers that the retention of such a structure indicates a primitive condition. Other organs of the Bandicoots are in a condition which may be described as persistently embryonic, and thus much more primitive than in any other known marsupial. Thus all the evidence points to the view that the marsupials originally developed a placenta, which has been aborted in the more specialized forms.

FEMININE FRILLS.

Record of Some of the Pupils of The Latest in Lingeric and Fashionable Trifles for the Season's Costumes.

> Shades of gray are charming in the new wooden materials which are to be seen for the new gowns. There are all sorts of pretty granadine-like materials, similar to those worn in the sixties-loosely woven materials, but with body enough to drape excellently. Some of them are to be seen with pret-ty satin stripes, some with little embroidered figures, the small bow knots that never seem to grow old.

> With the thought of the war in almost everything done nowadays in England, the bonbon boxes of silver are no longer used to bold various small bonbons, but are filled with "ment lozenges." They are fitted for the pocket, and are supposed to be just the thing for the soldier boy in time of need.

> Pretty little handkerchiefs with a pattern woven in them somewhat after the way patterns are woven in damask for the table are now coming in. There are little bowknots, for in stance, at intervals through the body of the handkerchief, and the tablelinen effect is most noticeable in a damask-like band around the edge, and in which the pattern is set at regular intervals, as in a border.

> Most of the shoppers from the big shops who purchase French lingeric are now abroad getting up the new stock, and, this being just about between seasons, it is a good time for bargains in pretty underwe ... There are many women who consider underwear their one extravagance. They do not care so much about their outside garments, but there is a certain delightful daintiness in wearing the prettiest and most attractive clothes out of sight. They feel that they dress for themselves, and it gives a certain feeling of self-respect and special pleasure. These women never dare to go near the underwear counters in the big shops when the contents of their purses are at a low ebb, for they simply cannot resist the pretty things displayed.

The drapery effect around the shoulders obtains in many things, especially where yokes are worn. Below the yoke of the opera cape soft material or lace is draped entirely around the shoulders, and in tea gowns the same effect is used with good results. Not every woman would like or would look well in an Empire wedding gown, but the gowns themselves are charming. One has a puffed yoke and sleeves, while from under the arms two prood pieces of lace are brought and faster a little to the left of the bust, the ends hanging in soft folds to the lower edge of the skirt. This gown is finished without a collar at throat, the top of the puffed yoke fitting snugly, with a cord set in.

Long Empire coats which have an air of distinction are kilt-plaited in the skirt and have little jacket effects. In one of these the jacket differs from the skirt, being heavily embroidered, as are the sleeves. The back of the jacket is cut up a little in the center, and comes down in long points in the front.

Much tulle is to be used with stray. this coming season, and many hats will be made in alternate rows of straw and tulle. A great deal of tucked taffeta will also be used, as it has been during the winter. The milliners are grouning because Easter comes so Inte this year. Very few women wear the old-time "Easter bonnet" to church on Easter day; it is not smart to do so but at the same time Easter is the honnet season, and its being late or early makes the spring millinery late or early. In good weather many of the smart women are out of town over Easter .- N. Y. Times.

A QUEER GIRL

By S. H. James.

"CHALL I invite her?" Stella Reeves paused, with pen ed in the air.

"Can I help you, Stella?" asked Mrs. Reeves, from the depths of her easychair by the fire.

"I was thinking, mother," responded Stella, "whether I should invite Myra Garland to spend a week here. You know that Patty Harper, Nellie Campbell and Jennie Stagg are coming."

"Why not invite Myra?" asked Mrs Reeves, eyeing her daughter curiously. "Well, I don't know," said Stella slowly. "She is ever so nice a girl, but she's queer." "How queer?"

"Very quiet, and not at all like other girls. Sometimes I like her, and sometimes I do not, and that is the way with all the girls. She is not good company, I am afraid, and yet I want to invite her for that very reason. She never goes home except during the summer, and it is so dreary in the academy during Christmas and Easter holidays. But I dare say she will not come, anyhow."

"Invite her, Stella," said Mrs. Reeves. quietly. And Stella did.

It was night when Myra came, the train being late, and Mrs. Reeves did not see her until they all sat at the breakfast table next morning.

All the girls were there, and at first Mrs. Reeves mentally decided that Myra was only a homely girl with brown hair and hazel eyes, and much like other girls, but before the meal was ended she found herself watching the girl with increasing curiosity. She was queer, in her reversed, almost morose, manner, in her habitual silence and her grave, sweet smile.

"She is queer," said Mrs. Reeves to herself, "but I like her."

Before the day was out she liked Myra more than ever. When the other girls went out for a walk, Myra stayed ndoors, fed the canary, dusted the orie-a-brac, and shook up the sofa and chair pillows, and did several other little tasks which Stella generally for-

Within three days Myra was firmly established in the Reeves household She was so handy and so helpful and so good natured, everybody said, that Stella and the girls actually held a caucus to discover why they had called her queer, and failed to find a cause. On the evening of the third day Ar thur Reeves came home on leave from he naval school, where he was a cadet Arthur was only 18, but such a big burly fellow, especially in his cape overcoat, that you would have taken him for 25 at least-at a distance. "You shall be our cavalier, Arthur, said Stella, "and I promise you shall have your hands full." "All right," asserted Arthur, carelessly. "Bring on your girls; you can't frighten a sailor."

Then began a round of gayety such as fairly took away the girls' breath They made trips to the old mill and the abandoned powder magazine, they went hunting and skating, and Arthur was the guiding spirit in all their pranks.

Myra revived her reputation for queerness in these expeditions. "By the great hoop-block!" cried Arthur, with undisguised admiration.

to his mother, as he was cating a late breakfast, "I call heren jolly girl, and no mistake? "The girls say she is queer," said Mrs. Reeves. "Queer!" he burst out. "Well, yes, perhaps she is, but I wish there were more queer girls like her. Is she rich, "I believe not, Arthur."

relience of "That's lucky!" "Lucky?" "For her. She will have to work, and she is sure to make her mark, and it "Arthur!" called Stella, outside, "if you ever get through eating, we girls would like to have you drive us to the post office." On Tuesday Arthur's leave would expire, and so it was arranged that on Monday there should be a picnic. It was Arthur's Idea. "Why not?" he asked. "It's mere nonsense to suppose that you can't have a pienic only in summer. What's the matter with taking the big sleigh, loading it up with pienie grub, including rubber blankets, in ease we want to sit on the ground, and having a firstclass time generally?"

It was unanimously voted that there was "nothing the matter with it," and on Monday morning the pienie sleigh
