It is to be borne in mind, too, that many edibles and some potables deteriorate rapidly in warm weather. This is patticularly true of meat, fish, fruit and milk. Too great pains can not well be taken to insure their preservation. And the fresher milk is when drank the better for the drinker. Ptomaine poisoning and disorders of the intestinal tract, work a vast deal of mischief when the mercury gets up to the 90s and shows a disposition to linger there.

The maintenance of health at this time of year is fully as dependent on sleep as food. As has already been intimated, susceptibility to many of the ille that flesh is heir to-colds and pneumonia in winter and malarial and gastric trouble in summer-is largely controlled by the state of the nervous system. If this is kept toned up by plenty of refreshing sleep, a greater power of resistance to threatened disorders results; whereas, if an adequate supply of nature's sweet restorer is not to be had, one's endurance is sensibly impaired.

Fortunately, the people of this section always enjoy cool nights. The hottest day is succeeded by a pleasant evening generous impulses, and he will be sadly and one can enjoy a good night's rest. If people observe the simple rules of health there need be no distress from

ONE MORE UNFORTUNATE.

This Time a Young Man Meets Death White Stealing a flide.

It would seem only reasonable that having had so many lessons of fatallties caused by stealing rides on railroad trains, the foolish practice would cease. Such, however, is not the case, and almost every week the newspapers contain notices of "one more unfortunate." This time the victim is a young man not over 25, fine looking, well dressed, smooth shaven, about 5 feet 10% in height, and had all the appearance of having been brought up a gentleman. We understand that he came from a well-to-do respectable family in Detroit. Much., who no doubt are anxiously awaiting news from the wand-ring boy. From what we can learn he is a violinist and has been wandering from place to place over the union, a book containing a memorandum of the different places visited being found in his pocket, with his impressions of them in connection, written in a splendld hand. But he found his grave in the city cometery at The Dalles this morning, having come to his death in the following manner: From the testimony of a man named

Remington, who is employed by Ward & Robinson, he was in Bridal Veil Wednesday, and accosting Remington asked him who he was, etc. He in turn said his name was F. H. Weber; that he was a musician and that he didn't intend to work; that he made some money by playing, but was going to steal a ride up. Thursday Remington saw him in this city, then yesterday recognized him as he lay a corpse in Crandall & Burget's undertaking parlors. Saturday afternoon the cook on the diner attached to No. 2, eastbound ,saw a man fall off the train as they reached, Quinn's, fourteen miles this side of Arlington, Before he could inform Conductor Glendenning they were two or three miles beyond. He accordingly wrote a note and handed it to Conductor Thompson at Castle Rock telling them spot where he was knocked off and between fifty and one hundred yards farther came across the man, who had crawled there. He said he was riding on which shows he must have leaned out very far to have struck the board, which

Death of H. P. Isnaes.

H. P. Isaacs, well-known throughout Oregon and Washington and one of the most successful business men on the cosst, owning large flouring mills at various points, died suddenly Saturday morning at the Imperial hotel in Portland. He arrived on the morning train from Walla Walla and complained to Mr. Knowles of having had a chill on the train, and requested him to send a physician to his room. Calling a short time afterward Dr. Macrum found him dead in bed, and a coroner's inquest proved that the cause was heart failure. His son, E. C. Issacs arrived in Portland and his remains were taken to Walla Walla, where his family resides, for burial. In the early 50's Mr. Isaacs was in business in The Dalles, carrying on a large mercantile business in a stone building which stood on the present site of the Columbia hotel. Leaving this city about '61, he went to Walla Walla, engaging in the flouring mill business, and later extended his interests into Idaho, until he has become known throughout the Northwest as a breiness man of wonderful sagacity. But with all his varied and pressing interests, his life was filled with kind acts and missed. Mr. Isaacs was about 75 years

THE CALISAYA TOPER

A Habit That Is Getting a Strong Hold in Chicago.

the and Effect of the Powerful Dru When Taken as a Stimulant-Made from Peruvian or Cinchons Bark.

Calisava has finally found its wa into the drink of the Chicago high live The use of the drug in New York el us a means of stimulating the stomaof dissipated men and women has t ready attracted attention from phys Anthorities of insune usylun have also begun to note the present of the "calisaya victim," although is probable he has been more or le in existence for a great many year past. It is not so very long ago, say writer in the Chicago Times-Heral that it was uncommon in the west connection with his liquor. In fact, I was ashamed to do so if he understoo its use, and generally took it in th privacy of his rooms or through th prescription of a lenient physician Now it is quite a fed to mix the lique and calisava in the delusion that the body is being permanently assisted an the nerves protected from the cvil e feet of too much stimulant. I saw il other day the brain of a man who ha died from a combination of too muc whisky and calimyn. A local physicia has also called my attention to tw ases of men under his treatment for the purpose of being freed from th se of the powerful drug.

Calisaya, or yellow einchona bark, reaches in its permanent effect on the system the heart and the brain at about the same time-not quite so quickly as small doses of assenic would or med ical doses of strychnia, but quick enough to produce at an early period some form of idiocy in the mind of the user. The thought centers of the brain are quite rapidly eaten out. A tissue is destroyed which under ordinary circumstances ought to last until a man has passed his sixtieth year. The limbs begin to tremble as the use of the drug increases. There may be more or less uncertainty in speech. Thought, which at first has been quickened by the influence of the calisaya, grows dull, and the liquor which is taken with it does not serve to quicken I am told that a cloud seems to pass over the brain, and things are seen by the mental eye as through a mist, Of course the drinker who needs his "brace" every 24 hours ascribes the first symptoms of disintegration to the liquor and a bad stomach and takes more calisaya. But this simply serves to hasten his end with a form of idioey aid to be not quite so painful as that from liquor alone. Men who eat heavily, drink much and take but little exreise are noted as the ones who now publicly absorb callsaya and point to t as a delightful innovation introduced by their better educated brothers of the east. In time their doses of callsaya fall to produce the desired beneficial results. If medical assistance is then desired the vietim has in most instances gone so far toward making a little something lower than a beast of himself that it is only necessary to write out his death certificate and after the countess of Chinchon. Chinchon is a community in Spain near Madria, The countess was the vice queen of Peru, who, in 1838, was cured of fever by the use of einehonn bark. and who assisted in making the cemedy known, without regard to all the consequences. The bark from which the drug is made comes from a genus of evergeeen trees, natives of the Andres from Colombia to Bolivia, growing chiefly on the eastern slopes at an average altitude of from 5,000 to 8,000 feet Here are found the sources of Peruvian or cinchona bark and quinine. There are about 40 species, but the einchorn bark of commerce is produced by about a dozen. The barks commonly found at any pharmacy are chiefly of three kinds-the ordinary Peruvian bark, calisaya and red cinchona. Ordinary cinchona bark is valuable as a remedy in fevers and as a general tonic, but the alkaloids obtainable from the bark have in practice largely taken the place of the back itself. If the callsays toper could confine himself to medicinal doses he probably would never suffer any ill effects, but he absorbs the drug in practically the same quantities as he oes his whisky or brandy,

I asked Dr. Frank N. Dond, a student f calisnyic victims, what particular ill ffeet local users of the drog would feet. side from those I mave mentioned. He said that they would be particularly liable to attacks of la grippe, and that this poison in their system would drive the la grippe to the head, with temporary or permanent insanity following. A person addicted to the use of calisaya is much more apt to take in grippe in its severe or fatal form. Dr. Doud noted also that hard drinkers who suddenly ceased the use of liquor eventually take colleans a substiute and find that they have jumped from the frying pan into the fire. He deplores the use of calisayn in social drinking, because of its damning effeet upon the nerve centers. As the habit is rapidly growing in Chiengo drinking circles we shall soon have for treatment the calisayle heart, the calisayle stomneh and the calisayle brain, with a fit termination in a callsayle insare asylum or cemetery.
