RATS DECLARE CIVIL WAR.

Intercolle Slaughter Relieves a Chicago Police Station of a Pest.

Another rat story comes from the Twenty-second street police station, reports a Chicago exchange. Not long ago the station was invaded by a colony of rats of various sizes and descriptions and no prisoners were kept in the cells for several days because of the viciousness of the rodents. A number of the officers were bitten while asleep in the dormitory and the pest was the cause of a great deal of trouble. Lieut. Aleck advertised for cats and a few of the residents in the vicinity gave the services of their house pets to rid the place of the pest. One of the cats was killed and its carcass was found in the basement. The smaller members of the colony were routed, but a number of big gray fellows refused to take orders from the cats and until one day last week did all they could to make life miserable at the station. Sergt. Carey says that they are all gone now. He declares that they divided themselves into two factions and declared civil war. The squadroom was their battleground and the sergeant says that he witnessed several engagements. After one battle he picked up the bodies of three warriors left dead on the field. The other night he saw five of them run out through the front door and since that time, he says, there has not been a rat in the station.

Four to One.

An English officer in Malia stopped, in riding, to ask a native the way. He was answered by a shrug of the shoulders, and a "No speak English." "You're a fool, then," said the officer. But the man knew enough English to ask: "Do you understand Maltese?" "No." "Do you know Arabic?" "No." "Do you know Italian?" "No." "Do you know Greek?" "No." "Then you four fools. I only one!"

Japs to the Rescue.

Japanese servants are the prevailing fad in society on the other side of the Atlantic. The Jap is regarded as "the Frenchman of the east," and is not only clean, but he refrains from gossip, possibly because his knowledge of the language does not admit of much chatter at present. When waiting he is allowed to wear his native dress, which always has the family crest embroidered on it, so that he not only adds picturesqueness but a distinct dignity to the family in which he condescends to serve. In time, no doubt, the idea will spread east, and may, perhaps, offer a solution to the ever-present and perplexing servant problem.—Malay Mail.

Tarantula Bite Trainmen.

Scorpions and tarantulas have made their appearance in such numbers at Iguala and other points on the Mexico, Cuernavaca & Pacific railroad as to interfere with the operation of that line and the transaction of other business. So many of the trainmen have been bitten by the poisonous insects that the running of trains is delayed. At Iguala a bounty has been offered by the municipal authorities for the killing of the pests, and hundreds of men and boys are employed in slaughtering them.—Chicago Record.

A Powder Mill Explosion.

Removes everything in sight; so do drastic mineral pills, but other mighty danger.
