TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1909.

The man who could run a newspaper to suit everybody, went to heaven long ago.

The value of your opinions depend largely upon whether you or someone else is appraising them.

Folks don't like a person who is too close—which may prove that distance lends enchantment.

The Evening News can be had for $2 per year by mail, or 50 cents per month by carrier. There is room on our subscription books for the names of a few more subscribers.

Apple blossoms in November; that is what Douglas county often produces. In the present instance a year-old Rome Beauty tree in North Roseburg has blossomed out beautifully, just as though it was springtime. But it is small wonder, since our winters are very much like spring in less favored sections.

The first issue of The Evening News met with an enthusiastic reception last evening, very gratifying to the management. Since then the subscriptions have kept pouring in from every quarter, and today space in the advertising columns is temporarily congested. The fact is becoming more firmly established there is room for only one daily in the city.

If you are a kicker and see the shadows of failure in everything that is proposed to help the town, for heaven's sake go get into some secluded canyon and kick your shadow on the clay bank, and give the men who are working to build up the town a chance. One long-faced, hollow-eyed, whining, capping, chronic kicker can do more to keep away business and capital from a town than all the droughts, short crops, chinch bugs, cyclones and blizzards combined.

There is no better or surer way of building up a city than for the people to religiously patronize their home industries. Every housekeeper in Roseburg can add her mite to the upbuilding of the town by insisting that, so far as possible, her grocer supply her home with Roseburg manufactured products. There are a number of staple articles made here at home which are the equal of any that can be shipped in, and by building up our industries we are building a greater Roseburg.

There is no reason for more than one daily newspaper being published in a city of less than 10,000 population, and because there was nothing of the kind in this city The Evening News was started. There was an unqualified earnest desire for such a journal, and the management realized it would be a paying proposition. If there is anybody who thinks different and is afraid he will not have sufficient money wherewith to pay his printers some Saturday night, he has the permission of The Evening News to quit before he becomes absolutely bankrupt.

HE HAS BEEN TRIED.

Our contemporaries in discussing the matter of the indictment permitted to hold in case of Hon. Binger Hermann have poor memories of past facts, or they were never acquainted with them concerning his still existing case. The editor of the Oakland Owl, in the last number of that paper writes thusly:

The attorney general has ordered the indictment against Dr. Perrin of California quashed. There was no evidence of guilt; he was indicted for conspiracy at the persistent request of W. J. Burns, the discharged detective, because Roosevelt wanted to make an example of him. Now Mr. Hermann should be tried or the indictment against him dismissed. Very few, if any, now believe that Mr. Henry ever intended to try Mr. Hermann. It is a rank injustice to keep an indictment hanging over a man for years without bringing him to trial.

The editor of the Owl will perhaps doubt our statement when we declare that Mr. Hermann has been tried upon every count there is in the overhanging indictment, and has been found innocent in every instance, but we assure the editor of the Owl and all others we are asserting the truth.

To explain and prove our assertion. When Mr. Hermann destroyed his own private records in Washington, as was proven on his trial for that act, as did his predecessors in the office of Commissioner of the General Land Office, his enemies had no proof of wrong doing to offer against the gentleman in question. They had to find something that Burns, the contemptible specimen of humanity could not. The proposition suggested itself to them to dig into everything with which he had been connected with while he was in the land office. And was this not done? And while it was being done were not witnesses called from every part of the state to testify to the detriment of Mr. Hermann. Was it not an open fact that during the trial that to be hostile to Hermann was tantamount to a free pass and all expenses paid to Washington? And after all this was done, and Hermann was allowed to depart without a smudge upon his reputation as a man, was not Burns' word taken in preference to that of the accused man? Everything we have stated is true. Henry will not come back.

As to the indictment, how long must the persecution last?

Eugene V. Debs may be wrong on many things, but he was right when he said: "There is something wrong with a country wherein the wealthy and aristocratic women will pay one hundred dollars for a pug-nosed bulldog to hug and kiss and fondle while many a bright little orphaned child holds up its tiny hands in vain appeal for a mother's love and caresses."

The family tree sometimes bears pretty poor fruit.

council to authorize the transfer of the sum of $238.21, accrued interest on the improvement bonds, from a special fund to a general fund. The treasurer contended that he would be obliged to pay the interest on the city hall bonds, amounting to $800, within a few days, and that without the above sum he would be unable to effect the transaction. Concurrent with the above request he also said that he might borrow several hundred dollars, alleging that the general fund was somewhat embarrassed at this time, and would not stand a heavy expenditure. Finally, it was decided to authorize the transfer of the amount in question from the special fund and accordingly the recorder was instructed to draw the necessary warrant. Mr. Hermann also brought to mind the fact that the city had drawn a warrant in the year 1901 in favor of the old Roseburg Water Company, and that the same was still outstanding. He asked that he be authorized to draw another warrant, alleging that the subsequent one had been misplaced. Such request was granted, and the recorder was instructed to draw a warrant in the sum of $150, the amount of the original claim. The officers of the Water Company will be required to post an indemnity bond to secure the city against any difficulty which may arise in the future relative to the warrant.

A remonstrance, signed by about fifty residents of the city was received, protesting against the ordinance regulating peddlers and other temporary hawkers in the city. No action was taken inasmuch as the ordinance referred to is yet in its infancy, having passed only its first reading.

The committee on fire and water submitted a lengthy report. The same was accepted and ordered referred to the fire commissioners.

The committee to whom the matter of investigating of the construction of the so-called central sewer was referred at a recent meeting of the council failed to report. Accordingly no action was taken.

A resolution authorizing the collection of the assessments on the Douglas-Claire and the Douglas Kane street sewers, was read and accepted.

The reading of the "peddler" ordinance was dispensed with on second reading. Indications tend to show that the ordinance will be defeated when placed on final passage. Councilman Mullen complained regarding a number of sidewalks on North Jackson street. The grievances were referred to the street committee.

The bills of William Knapp, $42; W. B. Oden, $3.75; F. C. Frear, $36.87 and J. F. Clements, $12.00, were held awaiting investigation at the hands of a committee. They will either be allowed or rejected at this evening's special session of the council. Upon allowing the bills Councilman Strong registered the dissenting vote.

OSTEOPATHY—WHAT IS IT?

Health may be said to express the harmonious reaction of the living organism, or body, to its environment. It is relative rather than an absolute status, and presupposes a normal structural and functional mechanism suited to its vital and physical relations.

Disease, on the contrary, is structural or functional abnormality of the organism, or both, caused by interference with the nerve force and blood and lymph supply to and from the tissue or organ involved, and induced by the outward action of mechanical, chemical or organized agent or physis influences.

Four well known schools of medicine are now recognized by law for the prevention and cure of disease, namely: allopathic, homeopathic, eclectic and osteopathic. The first three named systems base their diagnosis upon the symptoms of disease as they arise, and prescribe, in principle, some form of drug medication for a cure. Osteopathy is a system of mechanical therapeutics, wherein food and drink only—drugs and medicines never—are allowed to enter the stomach, and, in practice, it includes those methods of healing that have been found trustworthy and scientific, whether that be mechanical correction of the tissues of the body, nursing, effective dietetic and hygienic measures of hydrotherapy. These are employed to aid Nature and so, very naturally, effect a cure.

Life, not chemistry, is the basic principle of osteopathy, and its conception of the causes, its methods of diagnosis and its treatment of disease, which are physical, differentiate osteopathy from all other schools of medicine.

The osteopathic theory is that the energizing source of health is within the body, not without; that health is natural, disease unnatural; that bodily disorders are the result of mechanical obstruction to nerve vibrations and blood-flow; and that these obstructions are chiefly of spinal nature; that a diseased body needs adjusting mechanically, to release and free up the life forces—not to have poisonous drugs put into it; that there exists a definite and fixed relation between an organ and the cerebro-spinal and sympathetic nervous systems; in fact, that "the rule of the nerve and the artery must be absolute, universal and unobstructed, or disease will surely result." Upon these premises osteopathy bases its claim to rank as a distinct school of therapeutics.

The keynote of osteopathic medicine therefore is adjustment or readjustment of mal-aligned structure, and in the surgical field it is adhesive and manipulative; but when incision and excisions are imperative as a last resort the use of the knife is fully approved.

Says Dr. Hulett, an osteopathic author: "If the purposes of any application, appliance, method or procedure in the treatment of disease is to modify the vital processes, it is medical; if its effect is to remove conditions which are interfering with these processes, it is osteopathic. Among the latter are manipulation for the removal of lesions—bony, muscular, ligamentous, nervous or vascular, legitimate surgery, antiseptics, disinfectants, antitoxins, germicides, regulation of diet, habits, hygiene, sanitation and like environment."—Osteopathic Health.

PROCLAMATION

PROCLAMATION No. 1: Be it known to all the good readers of this bright new paper, and especially the lady readers, that I have just received a fresh addition to my stock of Phyrography goods.

There are some very attractive pieces, in fact all were selected with utility in view. A useful article is much better appreciated, as a present, than simply an ornamental one. But when you combine both utility and ornament then you have accomplished something. Christmas will soon be here and now is the time to begin preparation, for you cannot dodge the giving of some present. And by and by, when the air becomes charged with the Christmas spirit, you will not wish to dodge, so be early in beginning for the inevitable.

Have other things that are reasonable.
