Transfer of the Fourth Oregon Infantry into the coast artillery service of the state is the radical change in the Oregon National Guard that is to be made necessary in the next sixty days. The regimental identity of the command will have to be destroyed and the eight southern Oregon infantry companies will each receive a separate designation in the coast artillery. The members of Co. D., O. N. G., stationed at this place, are highly elated over the contemplated change, being considered a sort of promotion.

Frank E. Alby returned from Portland Saturday morning where he spent several days. He says that the Coos Bay and Inland Electric Railway is sure to go, notwithstanding reports to the contrary. While in Portland Mr. Alby had the pleasure to meet a number of capitalists interested in the project, all of whom declared that the road would be built as per agreement. The delay in finishing the bond is attributed to various reasons, the most important of which is the fact that one of the chief promoters has been ill and unable to examine the papers which will necessarily have to be duly executed before actual survey operations commence.

Considerable excitement occurred at the McCallen hotel shortly after 7 o'clock this morning, when a local female character of questionable repute, rushed into the lobby, and without explanation, said she was about to retire to room No. 48. Appearance tended to show that she was intoxicated, and therefore Landlord McCallen objected strenuously, ordering her from the hostelry. The "lady" refused to obey the commands of the landlord, however, and suddenly mounted the stairs with the intention of reaching what she supposed her abode. Realizing that the woman was either demented or in an effort to commit suicide, the landlord simply appealed to the police. Marshal Huffman responded promptly. After a brief search the woman was apprehended on the third floor of the hotel, apparently in search of her desired quarters. She was taken in custody by the officer and now languishes in the city jail awaiting the convenience of the city recorder.

It is alleged that the individual has a "bad case," alleging that she caused him considerable annoyance enroute to the battle.

Through his attorney J. A. Buchanan, James Inman, the pioneer resident of Flournoy Valley, has filed suit for divorce in the circuit court against his wife, Pearl Inman. He alleges that he and his wife were married in Douglas county in July, 1904 and have resided here continuously since. Among the allegations he accuses his wife of cruel and inhuman treatment coupled with adultery. He alleges that in July, this year, he was compelled to face the latter humiliation. Aside from an absolute decree he asks for a one-half interest in the property owned jointly by him and the defendant.

Mrs. Myron Whitaker, an aged lady who was enroute from Seattle to her home at Oakland, California, expired on Southern Pacific south-bound train No. 15, shortly before reaching Glendale Saturday morning. Her lifeless body was discovered by a lady companion who accompanied her on the trip. A peculiar instance connected with the unfortunate affair is the fact that the deceased occupied berth No. 13. The remains were taken from the train at Glendale and Coroner Jewett notified. He left for the scene on the 5 o'clock train, but upon arriving decided that an inquest was unnecessary. He brought the remains here yesterday morning, and upon the request of the deceased woman's daughter, Mrs. J. C. Hammond, of Oakland, they will be shipped to the southern city this evening. From appearances the lady was well dressed and apparently enjoyed plenty of money. It is said that she was ill upon arriving at Portland from Seattle, but refused to delay at that city. It is presumed that death was the result of a chronic ailment from which the deceased had suffered for years.
