(Special to The Evening News) CAIRO, Ill., Nov. 11.—The whereabouts of Sheriff Davis, who last spirited Will James, the negro accused of murdering Ann Polly, away is not known. The sheriff took James aboard the train to save the negro from a mob of several hundred men last night who were determined to hang him. It is thought the sheriff alighted at Dongora, from whence he drove to Mound City, where the negro is safe. It is reported the sheriff will bring the negro back to Mound City, 8 miles above Cairo, and lodge him in the Polaski County Jail. If James is put in a jail in this vicinity the structure is sure to be stormed. Visitors have been arriving from many points across the Ohio river, so the authorities were warned early this morning that many of the latter were prepared to take a leading part in any demonstration against the negro.

Before daylight today Chief of Police Egan was twice called upon to help check crowds of men and boys who had started toward the jail. In one case he tore a mask from the face of a man who appeared to be leading the gathering. He then prevailed upon the others to disperse, pleading that the evidence against James was only circumstantial.

SEPARATE ROAD DISTRICT Agitation Along This Line Is Being Made By Many.

From present indications it appears evident that an attempt will be made in the near future to set aside Roseburg as a separate road district, in fact, several prominent citizens are agitating the preparation of a petition at once, the same to be circulated and submitted to the consideration of the county court during their January session. Speaking to a News representative yesterday Dr. E. V. Hoover said that he believed immediate action should be taken toward such an end. Referring that Roseburg needed the money obtained from the road tax in the improvement of her streets. "With Roseburg an individual road district," said Dr. Hoover, "we would have plenty of revenue to pay the interest on the outstanding bonds as well as pave more streets next year. To pave more streets, however, he explained that it would be necessary to hold another bonding election that the voters may display their colors."

HUNGER STRIKE ENDED

Half of Prisoners Take Food but Prefer Bread and Water

THOUGHT ALL REST WILL

It has Been a Tough Trial for the Industrials, and Beyond Human Endurance—End Was Certain.

SPOKANE, Nov. 11.—The Hunger strike instituted by the I. W. W. members was broken this morning. Half of the prisoner took food, but preferred bread and water. It is believed all of the prisoners in jail have been fasting will accept food before night. The industrial ranks are thinking, and there are no volunteers for jail. There were no violations of the objectionable ordinance and consequently no arrests this morning. The car laden with prisoners for Fort Wright was derailed with a bar last night. The leaders of the I. W. W. declare it was the work of the enemies of the workers, but the police believe it to have been done by the revolutionists in their endeavor to free the prisoners. The break in the hunger strike did not come unexpected. It has been continued to the extent of human endurance. Many of those who have submitted to it are actually so reduced and weakened from starving that they cannot move about without assistance. Many remain in their beds for the reason they are not able to get about. There has been no fake in the matter of their starving themselves.

GLENDALE NEWS

Interesting Items Gathered by a Live Correspondent.

When train No. 15 drew into our city on last Saturday morning with awed faces and in gentle tone the sad announcement was made that an aged lady had died in her berth while the train was coming to this place. No one knew just when the spirit took its flight. Reverently with tender touch the men who were gathered about conveyed the body into the depot. The hearts of all were touched by that edict of nature that proclaims the whole world akin. She was somebody's mother and somewhere her loved ones were waiting to welcome her. Eyes unshed with weeping glistened suspiciously as in soft tones she spoke of the small little form resting on a stretcher at our depot. Her clothing and belongings had the evidence of wealth and refinement. And this unknown mother received the tribute of falling tears. When the silent messenger came, it may be, he found her sleeping; as the icy hand touched her it brought the last dreamless sleep. And the grand awakening of being at home in the "Father's House," where to many many mansions be. We have a strong conviction in our heart that she had her lamp trimmed and burning, and was ready to answer "Master Here Am I." Oh, this pathetic little story that awoke tender memories of "Home and Mother" in all our hearts may it be a reminder to all to cherish the dear old mothers who are growing old and drifting away, for they have had sorrows and heartaches of which you are not aware. Smooth the pathway to the tomb for them by kind words and affectionate sympathy for it will not be long until the message will come to you that "Mother is in Heaven." And there will be no regret if we have smoothed the way in her declining years and scattered the flowers of affection in kind words and kind actions about her while she is yet with us.

Wedding Bells.—Our popular modiste is very busily engaged making a handsome wedding dress. Particulars next week.

At 8 p. m. last night all the roosters in this city engaged in a melodious concert that echoed and re-echoed from hill to hill. Just who they were serenading we cannot say. It may be they were voicing their thanks at the recent visit of Judge Wonacott and District Attorney Brown to our city, who laid an embargo on a few boys who had disturbed our peaceful slumbers for some time. Folks love to tell us that this entopian music indicates a change in the weather, which may be from bad to worse as indications suggest at present.

The Osteopath as a Physician.

The skilled physician is really a philanthropist, exerting his energy for humanity's welfare in every particular. A man capable and learned, familiar with experiences in every walk of life, one who understands the human family in its various temperaments and moods. His patients' physical, moral, mental and spiritual welfare is his first consideration and chiefest care, his own financial remuneration second. No man receives a greater degree of public confidence than does he. His sympathy, moral courage, tact, integrity, honor and discretion are needed hourly, and unless these are compounded in proper proportion his efforts are useless.

Without intelligence sympathy is often imposed upon—minus great moral courage he will run up the white flag before danger really arises. Devoid of tact and honor, his will be a thorny path indeed, eventually leading to an empty office.

And last but not least, is discretion—this characteristic enabling him to maintain or destroy much of the well-being and happiness of himself and his community. However, a physician's privileges are accompanied by their own penalties.

There are times when it is a satisfaction to say to this man, "do" and to another, "do not," to be obeyed and revered, to be questioned, quoted and praised, to put up a yellow card or a red tag, but there comes criticism too, unwarranted calumny, bitter reproach and deepest ingratitude, for 'twas decreed long ago, that the physician has no hours any one is bound to respect, and nothing save his own disabling illness is accepted in the public's mind, as sufficient excuse for refusing any call to any where, day or night.

He is not permitted any private joys or public pleasures—and his fads, fancy chickens, fine dogs or race horses, are considered "bad taste," likely to lessen his efficiency as a physician.

I do not need to tell you that the death rate of physicians is the highest of any profession in the world, and I will not stretch your patience by speaking further of the high ideals and lofty ethics of this profession which exacts from its followers the largest responsibilities—but nothing else than those is worthy an osteopath.—Osteopathic Journal.
