WE OPERATE OUR OWN DELIVERY

HINTS FOR STOCK OWNERS.

Never feed corn alone to hogs. It is false economy. Carelessness in handling pigs is a bad habit to acquire. Even on cold days hogs should have plenty of good fresh air. The idea that anything is good enough for a pig is a mistaken one. Some corn stalks may be fed to the porkers every day. They are sweet and do the hogs good. Some farmers sell their corn shelled and others dispose of it in the ear, but the western farmers find it most profitable to sell it in the hog. Nowadays draft horses must be matched to sell well. Choose for the breeding mare a solid color—dark bay, black or chestnut. In countries where colts run out the year around, the mature horses have much stronger legs. Horses of color and with peculiar markings never sell so well as those of solid colors; besides they are more difficult to match. Look out for bad habits in your colts. It is so much easier to keep them out than it is to get rid of them if they once get a hold on the young horse. All good farmers watch the condition of their colts when put into winter quarters. A colt allowed to lose its flesh and become thin, will never make the horse he would if kept growing from the start. The best feeds are clover hay, a mixture of oats, wheat bran, linseed meal and roots. The sheep barn must be dry and well ventilated. Foul odors and too much heat bring on pneumonia. All straw, stalks, etc., used for litter in the sheep barn should be run through a cutter to increase the power of absorption. A juicy wether hung up in a cold, dry place will provide choice dinners for the family until it is used up. Don't forget to have mashed turnips and butter with it. That nice ewe is just as nice for you to keep as she is for the man who likes the looks of her to buy. Unless you are overstocked, keep her; and if you are, better sell some other sheep. A good rack for feeding sheep can be made by almost any sensible farmer. About all that is needed is a support for the hay so that it will not fall to the ground and be wasted and also be handy for the sheep to get at. A temper under control is a valuable asset to a man employed in the handling of cows. Warmth is half the feed for cows, and remember that foul air does not keep an animal warm. Every cow should be brushed most thoroughly every day. Keeping the skin clean and active is conducive to health. Make up your mind that you will not let the calves get stunted this winter. Keep them growing. They will be better cows and better cows are what we are all working for. It is much better and cleaner not to wipe dairy utensils with a cloth, no matter how white it may be. If the cleansing water is plentiful and hot, the vessels dry much more healthfully without wiping. There is no danger of overstocking the dairy cow market so long as the systematic robbing of the herds by the disposal of the calves continues. When cows sell at from $50 to $75 at public sales, it seems like folly to hurry off the calves for a few dollars a head.

TEMPERMENT OF GUESTS

"Do I believe that a man's name as he writes it is an indication of his character?" repeated a hotel clerk who has been behind the counter in several cities. "I don't know about the character, but I do know that the best of them unmask their real temperament when they write their names on a hotel register—and I hold that there's a difference between character and temperament. A man may be billious and yet have a good character. A man may be a crank and yet hold a job in a bank. I knew a preacher that had a case of dyspepsia that would have made an angel jump over a tea rail fence, but he was all right on the religious goose. I'm talking about temperament, that shows itself when a man grabs a pen and writes his name on the register and where he falls from. "When a man spreads a John Hancock brand of chirography on the book of arrivals I know what sort of room he wants. I know he has to have a bed in which he can wallow like a buffalo. "When a guest writes his name like he would write it in a lady's album I put him in the finicky class. I know he wants a thin glass from which to drink ice water. "The arrival who uncovers himself the quickest is the man who tries to write differently from anybody else and has an acquired autograph. The man who develops the trait of getting something under false pretenses begins by trying to assume an autograph. I always know that this fellow will have a rumpus with the waiter or the bellhop or the liquid dispenser. "There is one chap that reaches my heart—the man who writes 'and wife' for the first time after his own name. He can't disguise the fact by his manner, to say nothing of his chirography, that he has just started on the first lap of his honeymoon. He doesn't try to counterfeits his penmanship, but he writes 'and wife' as if he thought we were on, and wondered how we knew it. "All things being equal the newly married arrival is the most agreeable guest in the house. A fellow with a new wife wears velvet shoes so that his kick is never felt. I think if anybody writes a perfectly natural autograph it is the man who has just been married. Then if ever a man tries to be just what he is."

LOCAL NEWS.

Mrs. George Noah returned from Deer Island this morning after a brief visit at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Huntley. The case of the State vs. Hi Chung, proprietor of the Oregon restaurant, is being tried before a jury in Justice of the Peace John T. Long's court this afternoon. Hi is charged with selling a bottle of beer to Charles F. Parker, a former prohibition detective, on December 18. At the time of going to press the evidence was all in and the attorneys had taken up their arguments. The only evidence of importance adduced by either the state or the defense came from a Grants Pass party who claimed that he had analyzed the article and had it to run over four per cent alcohol.

TOTAL OUTPUT TIMBER.

Much of Which Was Put Out Under Free-Use Permits. "The total cut of national forest timber during the year was nearly 400,000,000 board feet, of which over 100,000,000 feet were given away under free-use permits," says the secretary of agriculture in his last annual report which has just been made. The timber acquired under free-use permits was used by settlers, schools and churches within the forests. The secretary says that the receipts from timber sales were about $700,000, and continues: "Free use of timber was heaviest in Idaho, with over 18,000,000 board feet, followed by Montana, Colorado, Utah and New Mexico, with amounts ranging from nearly 17,000,000 to less than 10,000,000 feet. California, Wyoming, and Oregon had each a free-use cut of between 6,000,000 and 7,000,000 feet. The remaining national forests states follow with smaller amounts. "Of the timber cut under sales, Montana furnished nearly 86,000,000 feet, or 24 per cent; Colorado 44,000,000 or 13 per cent; California 39,000,000 feet, or 11 per cent; and Idaho 35,000,000 feet, or 10 per cent. These amounts correspond to the following percentages of the estimated stand of national forest timber in each state: For Montana, three-tenths of one per cent; for Colorado, four-tenths of one per cent; for California, four-one-hundredths of one per cent; for Idaho, one-tenth of one per cent. In other words, the cutting is far within the growth capacity of the forests."

TEACHING THE BOY TO COOK

One of the speakers at a recent congress of school officers at the Seattle Exposition strongly recommended that boys be taught to cook. He suggested that a knowledge of the art would not only add to the usefulness of the possessor, but open the way to a well paid employment, should he adopt it as a vocation, and it might tend toward increased serenity and comfort in many households in this country. The views of this Western educator are thoroughly sound. He has indicated an addition to the course in primary education which could be adopted with profit both to individuals and society in general. The boy or man who knows how to cook has a distinct advantage over the one who does not. Even if he knows how to prepare only the most simplest dishes and to make drinkable tea or coffee, he enjoys a certain independence of servants impossible to his neighbor to whom the home art is still a mystery. In the absence of his women folks, in the sudden desertion of his domestic help, the man who can broil a chop or a steak together with a pot of coffee, exhalant an aroma to justify its name, is a person to envy. Hunger does not terrify him. He defies, then satisfies it with modest creations of his own art. The preparing of which imparts a sense of gratification and wholly beyond the understanding of the uninitiated and helpless. Cooking is what one makes of it, be the cook man or woman. To one who takes it up with respect and intelligence which it deserves it is a fine art, but when regarded as an unavoidable necessity, it is simply drudgery. The cook of this latter type is not to be trusted. The chance is that he will burn the chop or steak and that he will make einders of the toast and that his coffee will have been boiled beyond recognition. An omelet prepared by such a cook is likely to be tough, heavy and tasteless, and his waffles, if he ventures that far into the finer atmosphere of the art, will usually be a reproach on their name. But when the cook approaches his art duly conscious of its dignity and its uplifting possibilities, his productions become things of charm and beauty, as well as nutrition. The chops he serves are tender and juicy; yellow with the goodness of fresh his muffins are light as his heart and eggs; if there is an omelet it is a symphony in gold, puffy and enticing, while the coffee steaming hot and blended with cream above the suspicion of dilution, gives out a fragrance as captivating as that of the flowers in the center of the table. One who claims to know insists that no man ignorant of cooking can understand its fascination. He extends moreover, that the art exerts a spiritual influence upon its devotees which they alone can appreciate. Naturally this earnest but possibly overly enthusiastic amateur in the art joins heartily with the Seattle professor in the contention that the boys should be taught to cook.

CAUSE DELAY.

Ancient Laws Retard Development Work.

Under Oregon's old riparian water laws, and the influence of the enormous grants made wagon road and other companies, development of the great interior of the state is sure to be retarded, according to the effect of a decision rendered this morning by Judge Wolverson in the Federal court. In this case the court was impelled to hold that riparian rights acquired prior to enactment of the desert land law of 1877, gave to the large land owner, as well as to the small farmer, the privilege of insisting on all the vague benefits coming from having flood waters of spring overflow their holdings. The decision came in the case of the Eastern Oregon Land company, which is one of the wagon road grantees, vs. the Willow River Land & Irrigation company. It was proved in the hearing that the Eastern Oregon company had a considerable acreage which was annually overflowed in the spring, and that this soaking gave the land life to yields crops of wild grasses and other forage. The Willow River company had acquired a mining company's rights on the stream, and was preparing to use this water for irrigating arid land. The plans of the last named company were to construct a dam a short distance above the meadows of the Eastern Oregon company, store the water during flood season and then distribute it through ditches to farms. That the Willow River had a right to the normal flow of the stream was conceded. The Eastern Oregon company insisted that its rights went to the flood flow only, but in this its title could not be defeated by any later reclamation projects. The court sustains the Eastern Oregon company, which will have the effect of preventing the storing of flood waters on that stream for any purpose. To what extent such constructions of the law may be invoked to check storage of flood waters could not be stated by the conservation men who discussed the matter this morning. Since the act of 1877 was passed, it is conceded that the old riparian rights have been qualified, and since the enactment of the new water law of 1907 the utmost power is given the state to use water where it is needed to carry on reclamation work, so far as it does not result in confiscation of private property, title to which has already passed. In the decision rendered, a restraining injunction was granted the Eastern Oregon company, conditioned upon the filing of a $10,000 bond, and this will be invoked to stop construction of the dam.
