DOINGS AT MYRTLE CREEK

There will be a special election March 7th for the purpose of voting on the proposed new charter. We have examined it carefully and there seems to be no reason why it should not be adopted.

Myrtle Creek is to have a convention next week. All the Rebekah lodges of Douglas county will meet in a district convention here on the 11th, and will be addressed by the grand president of the order.

Mr. Richardson, one of the recent arrivals looking for a home, has purchased from J. C. Somer six and a half acres of the latter's place south of town, and will proceed at once to erect a home and otherwise improve the place.

City Marshal E. M. Lyons ordered all card tables removed from places where such were conducted, until the proprietors had complied with the new ordinance, and Monday morning all tables were stacked and we understand will remain so.

Saturday night was one of especial interest to the Odd Fellows and their friends in this vicinity. It being the night for the semi-annual installation of officers, the members of neighboring lodges, both Odd Fellows and Rebekahs, had been invited to be present, which brought out a gathering that well filled the lodge room and resulted in a session of interest to all. After the installation addresses were delivered by visiting members, and recitations and music by wives of members, which made the evening pass pleasantly. The company then adjourned to a bonafide supper provided for by the lodge at the Farmers' hotel. The fact that just an even 200 people partook of supper is an evidence that the gathering was successful. The officers elect were installed by District Deputy Grand Master J. H. Foreman, and were as follows: E. M. Bogardus, N. G.; Cleas Weaver, V. G.; S. W. Rayless, S. P.; Lugenhuhl, W.; N. Andrews, Ch.; A. A. Piper, Con.; C. Strong, I. G.; M. A. Preston, O. COST OF AUTOMOBILE.

The Fuel Consumption of Automobiles Is Small.

The fuel consumption of the cheap little runabouts is wonderfully small. In an official test at the New York automobile carnival, a Fiat auto, the record established was 47.4 miles to a gallon of gasoline though another car actually scored 46 gallons, but lost the record by deviating from the prescribed course.

A gallon of gasoline costs anywhere from 25 cents, when bought at a roadside gas station, down to 12 cents when purchased by the barrel. When the average driver under average conditions will do 40 miles (that is half as well, he can be thankful to be able to travel 80 miles for a price of a cent to half a cent per passenger per mile for fuel. A heavy car that runs nine miles per gallon of gasoline is doing well.

As for actual available power the purchaser of an $850 five-passenger touring car, with its 20 horse power engine, gets exactly as much as he could get in a $2,000 car with a 30 horse power engine. The cheaper car weighs only 1,200 pounds, or 90 pounds per horsepower.

The past year marks the real beginning of the era of the low priced car, which, as the dealers understand the terms, is one that calls for less than $2,000.

Presumably how much less depends upon the individual purchaser, his bank account and the service required of the car. The average selling price of the 200,000 cars to be built in 1910 will be $1,200, though there is every indication that the cars selling below that will be in considerable demand.

If a two-passenger car for ordinary use is wanted, a runabout that will fill the bill can be had for $550. For $130 more a better car can be bought, while one still better, with a seat in the rumble for a third passenger, can be had for $750. For $850 a touring car seating five may be had which will fully meet the requirements of the average man, if he is a reasonable person.—Outing.

THE MAN WHO WINS.

There is no one thing that young Americans need more to learn than the tremendous power of plodding. We are not plodders by birth, and our highly exciting climate tempts us away from plodding. For all that it may be asserted without question that the methodical, steady, even, slow patient progress is the one that never fails.

To get the habit requires a fixed resolution. One must think on the succession of blows and how they tell. Think of the accumulation of little things—dust particles, for instance—or a problem in interest money. Think much and often along such lines, till the mind becomes impressed with the idea.

Loss no opportunity to note the progress of the small till it becomes the great, as seen all about us. This practice, faithfully pursued, will exert a singular influence upon the impatient mind before one is aware of it. By such means the idea becomes a part of the machinery of mind, and is worth ten thousand specific resolutions to be patient and plod on. This experience and practice should be inculcated in the mind of a nervous, impulsive boy. It is the only way to steady him.

To learn to plod well one must learn to love the process of his work, not the result. Not an easy thing to do. We all do finally wake up to realize that there is more gratification in thinking, planning and building our new house than there is in the finished dwelling. But elders should try to teach that experience to boys.

Not one thing done satisfies, but the thing doing. When a thing is done we are urged by nature to begin something else. The care of details, the happiness in the small, insures against defeat or accidents that delay.

There is a lot of nonsense being written about the "man that gets there."

The man that is "getting there" is the man we want, for as soon as he "gets there" we put him to something new and a-getting there.

To love one's work means to love the daily doing one day after another. That is the plodder, mind. Perhaps it may be said that no one really loves his work who is impatient with its routine.

There is no form of courage that is so superb as the plodder's courage. In days that are dark and nights that are slow, and the steady, uncheered grind goes on. The hand is not playing and the reclining has passed by. But this slow and sure soul keeps on.

This is what we call pluck. Its average is sure. It simply cannot fail.

But most men are ignorant of that golden law of averages, that key which unlocks every door.

OLALLA BUDGET.

Beautiful days and cold, clear frosty nights. Still the farmer is unable to do much farming.

The railroad surveyors are still in our midst, and by the careful and judicious manner of their procedure, we have but little doubt but what we will see a railroad track laid through the valley and everything else will come out all O. K.

The condition of Mr. Wagoner, the gentleman stricken with paralysis, remains unchanged. A petition has been signed and circulated by the good people of this vicinity who know the circumstances, urging the county board to make an allowance of $10 monthly for the support of himself and family. It is earnestly hoped the board will take a favorable action in the matter at once.

Miss Edna Bushnell of Camas Valley, was a pleasant visitor at her home recently.

Mr. Westley Newland, one of our confirmed bachelors, stole silently away and married another girl without telling our girls, who are very "red-headed" about the affair. Congratulations Wes.

Lewis Holdredge of Portland is visiting at the home of his sister, Mrs. Bill Ireland.

Mr. W. R. Wells, our genial postmaster, reports the largest holiday business he has ever had.

School will re-open on Monday, Jan 10, after a vacation of two weeks. The pupils are all requested to come provided with pencils, pens, paper and a beautiful supply of determination to work and accomplish more this term than any preceding one.

Henry Ireland is in Roseburg attending to other matters, transacting business and incidentally the Misses Irene Goodman and Ida Friend spent Xmas at their respective homes here.

The social season has opened unusually early this year, with a round of brilliant parties and receptions. Notably among these was the New Year's reception held at the beautiful home of A. E. Terbaugh. Covers were laid for sixteen guests, who partook of a most delicious repast, prepared by the hostess. The time was pleasantly passed with social conversation and music.

A brilliant reception was tendered Mrs. Cora Williams at her mansion on Broadway by her host of friends. The elite of the valley were present to grace the event and make it unusually pleasant. The beauty of the fair women present and the beautiful costumes worn by all tended to give additional brilliancy to the event. The evening was delightfully passed with sparkling repartee, music and games. At midnight a dainty luncheon was served by the host and hostess and when the hours were "wee and sma" the guests departed wishing their kind hostess a return of so pleasant an event.
