SOME FREE ADVICE

Cost of High Living Causing Much Worry

HARVEY WILEY TALKS

Says that the Housewife should Not Abstain from Purchasing What She Wants—But She Should Buy Less of It.

"Don't turn food crank because the things you like have risen in price.
"Don't boycott meat because steaks are expensive. If you do, you may get sick, because your teeth and your digestive apparatus were built for a mixed diet.
Eat more canned goods; they are cheaper than ever before.
If combinations continue to control the prices of food products the government may be obliged to enact anti-high-profit laws similar to those aimed against usury."
DR. HARVEY W. WILEY, Chief of Bureau of Chemistry.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—Dr. Wiley's advice to the housekeeper in the present financial crisis brought about in the family purse by the high cost of living, is to abstain from worry and buy everything she has been buying—only not so much of it.
"A ten cent soup bone will flavor half a bushel of potatoes," said Dr. Wiley, "and will, if cooked right, taste just as good as a dollar steak. With the addition of an onion, a carrot and a sprig of parsley, that soup bone can be made to produce enough good nourishing soup for a big family. Then, after the soup is made, save a little of the fluid and boil it down in the kettle with the meat. Then you'll have a 'pot roast' which, if made right, will be fit to set before the president.
"Canned goods of all kinds are cheaper than ever before in our history. Beans and peas have not risen appreciably in price, and make the best food for man. Wheat flour at the price it is now selling is the cheapest food that can be bought, and corn meal hasn't changed in price for the last ten years.
"If the American cook would study the methods of the French cook, who uses up all the 'left overs,' you would not hear so much about the increased cost of living. The average American cook throws away or wastes enough to keep the ordinary French family going. Over there they save every scrap of fat and every crumb of bread, and convert them into appetizing dishes. They know how to make the most out of the cheaper cuts of meat. Over here the average cook turns up his or her nose at the coarser grades of meat and thinks that nothing is fit to eat unless it comes from the neighborhood of the tenderloin.
"Of course a great deal of the added cost in the price of meat products has come about as a result of combinations of dealers. The farmer is not getting much more for his cattle than he did ten or fifteen years ago. The government or the state will have to step in one of these days, if these combinations continue to increase the prices, and enact laws prohibiting dealers from making more than a certain amount of profit.
"This suggestion, of course, will be hailed with cries of 'paternalism.' Well, it is to be paternalism, if you please. All government is paternal, when you come right down to brass tacks. If the government can enact laws declaring the amount of interest or profit a dealer in money shall make—like the statutes relating to usury—why should it not be justified in setting down the lines for the dealers in the necessities of life? The men who rob the market basket are more criminal than the men who extort money on illegal loans.
"A limit of say fifteen or twenty per cent net profit a year might be set down for the butcher and grocer. The dry goods merchant or the contractor who builds houses would be glad to make as much, and if it worked out for the good of the people in the case of the grocer and butcher, might be extended to include the clothier, the shoe dealer, and all other tradesmen handling the necessary goods of life.
"Whatever you do, however, I beg of you not to become a food faddist. I am therefore opposed to these six months boycotts against meat. The human frame was built for a mixed diet and to cut off meat suddenly is likely to play all kinds of havoc with the system. I have observed that those vegetarians, not eating and uncooked victual cranks do not live any longer than the average run of us poor meat eating mortals. I do know that they all look hungry, and whenever I meet one of them I am tempted to invite him into the nearest restaurant to have a good steak—if I happen to have the price.
"What the present situation requires is a little more judgment in buying, a little more judgment in cooking and less worry over the food trust."
Dr. Wiley specializes in eggs. He modestly says he's an expert on hen fruit, and the other day dropped little gems of egg wisdom to the members of the house sub-committee on the District of Columbia, during their consideration of the high cost of living problem at the capital.
The doctor appeared before the committee with about a peck of eggs of varying ages and dubious paste, a bag of salt, and a big glass. In the latter he mixed a strong solution of brine.
"If you want to know whether the eggs you are buying are strictly fresh, have really been laid this year," he explained, "just take a glass, fill it full of brine, as I have done, and drop the valuable farm yard product therein. If it sinks to the bottom of the glass, the egg is fresh and worth the money; if it rises to somewhere near the top of the fluid, it is not as fresh as it used to be, and if it floats well out of the water, it is of the sort that are supposed to be hurried at bad actors and isn't worth anything a dozen."

The committee was interested immediately, and crowded around the doctor as he proceeded to test the eggs he had brought.
"That's a fine, fresh egg," he observed, as one of the specimens dropped plump to the bottom.
"How do you know it is fresh?" asked Congressman Moore.
"Because one of my inspectors was at the hen house this morning and saw it laid," replied the doctor triumphantly.

SAFES IN BIG HOTELS.

Valuables Kept in Them by Guests For Years at a Time.

A woman walked up to the counter of a fashionable hotel and asked for a package of valuables which was in the safe.

"If I had not wanted one particular thing I suppose I should have left the package where it was for another three years," she said to the clerk.

"Yes," said the clerk in answer to a question after the woman left, "that packet had really been in our safe for three years. Why, we have all sorts of valuable papers, jewelry and even money that are entrusted to our keeping for years at a time. People seem to prefer a hotel safe to a safety deposit vault. One reason perhaps is that it costs nothing. Another is that the standard of hotel clerks has improved.
"It is astonishing the amount of jewelry that people keep in hotel safes. Of course the owners have originally stopped in the hotel, but they go away, leaving their valuables, and I have known such persons to be gone as much as two years and never make an inquiry about their property in that time.
"To show you how much confidence people have in hotels and their employees I might mention that the other day a man came in here and put four $1,000 bills in an envelope, wrote his name on the latter and asked me to put it in the safe. Not long ago another man actually did the same thing with seven $10,000 bills.
The clerks of several other hotels talked in a similar strain without any outside suggestion.
"I'll bet I have handled more than a million dollars' worth of jewelry today," said one. "Look here," and he opened the safe and piled six or eight big jewelry cases on the counter, but hurriedly put them back. "In one of those I know there is over $200,000 worth, and what I showed you was only a few of what the safe contains."
