A very sad death occurred in the city shortly after 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, when Mrs. Emma Field, aged 58 years, wife of Aphas Field, county bridge contractor, passed away at her home on Mill street as the result of burns received while attempting to light a gasoline stove on April 1. The lady was well and favorably known in this city where she has resided for the past 25 years. She was prominent in social circles and her death has cast a gloom over the city. Aside from a heartbroken husband she leaves one daughter, Mrs. A. C. Marks; and two sons, Fred and Charles Fields, all of whom are residents of Roseburg. The funeral was held at the family residence, 735 Mill street, at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon, interment occurring at the Masonic cemetery. A large crowd was present to pay their last respects, showing in a measure the high esteem in which the lady is held in this community. The floral offerings were many and beautiful.
