Mrs. Emma Collins, of Portland, arrived in the city this morning in search of her daughter, Miss Alice Collins, whom she alleges left the family home at Portland several weeks ago with the intention of coming to Roseburg. Mrs. Collins appears skeptical of publicity and for that reason she refrained from divulging her difficulties to local officers. In company with a well known lady, Mrs. Collins searched the several rooming houses this morning, but to no avail, no trace of her daughter could be found. Inquiry at the several restaurants also proved fruitless, no girl of the description furnished having partaken of meals in these resorts. Mrs. Collins says that she will proceed to Medford this evening where she will continue her search, having reason to believe that the girl is located somewhere in Southern Oregon. When she left Portland she is supposed to have accompanied a strange man, whom the mother describes as a tall and handsome young fellow, possessing plenty of money. In the event the girl is found she will be persuaded to return home without arrest inasmuch as Mrs. Collins desires to avoid unnecessary publicity.

That Louis W. Hill and party, now touring the coast, will be provided with ample entertainment during their brief stay in this city, can be no better evidenced than by the elaborate preparations undertaken at a meeting of the committees held at the Roseburg Commercial Club rooms last evening. A Portland caterer of rare ability has been employed to prepare the banquet which will be served at the Elk's temple at an expense of $10 per plate for local guests. Those who will eat and drink to the generosity of Roseburg free of charge will be the members of the Hill party and members of the local press. It is anticipated that the banquet will far exceed all former events of a similar nature held in this section of the state. Among the local orators who will deliver brief addresses are District Attorney George M. Brown, Hon. Blinger Hermann, and Attorney Dexter Rice. Telegrams have been sent to the Hill party, both to Ashland and Klamath Falls, for the purpose of ascertaining when they will arrive here and the amount of time that will be spent in viewing Roseburg and the adjacent country. An answer is expected some time this evening.
