Gaynor's Assailant also Reads Henry George

NEITHER INSPIRED CRIME

Secret Service Men Redouble Vigilance and will Give no Crank Opportunity to Duplicate the Gaynor Tragedy.

(Special to Evening News.) JERSEY CITY, Aug. 11.—Concerning his attempt to kill Mayor Gaynor at the Hoboken docks recently, Gallagher made the following statement: "I intended to kill Gaynor, and that is all there is to it, but I hope that he recovers. My favorite author is Shakespeare; have read Dickens, Henry George's Progress and Poverty. That is the only modern book that I read constantly, but neither George or Shakespeare inspired me to shoot Gaynor. I simply felt that I had no other way of remedying a wrong. I am a follower of Hearst, and when he was a candidate for mayor I voted for him, and tried to get my friends to vote for him. I believe in him and what he says. Until recently I was a democrat and stuck to Tammany Hall until I found that we were not getting justice, then turned to Hearst. I advised my friends to read Hearst's writings; that his teachings were right. Nothing is too good for men like Hearst. He tells the truth and is entitled to any reward that the people can give him."

CO. D IN CAMP.

Interesting Letter from the Boys at the Front.

COSGROVE, Wash., Aug. 9.—(Editor News.)—Company D arrived in camp at this place at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon after a long and tiresome ride, and at once began pitching their Libby tents, and establishing camp. The non-commissioned officers being well trained, the work was accomplished by early bed time, and all were ready for the more arduous duties of the camp.

This morning first call sounded at 5 o'clock, and although they are given only five minutes to dress and fall in line for roll call, not a man was absent. The forenoon was devoted to practice in pitching shelter tents; and in the afternoon all the sergeants and corporals under the command of First Sergeant Agee worked out a "problem" in patrol duty. The umpire, a regular army captain, gave them great praise, even though Sergeant Marker and Corporals Boyd and Spencer got lost in the woods and did not find their companions again until after the maneuver was over. The patrol movement was toward Spray lake, several miles south of the camp.

Tonight the men are going to bed early, for they expect to be marching by 6 o'clock on some kind of a maneuver tomorrow, which will take all day. Fifty rounds of blank ammunition will be issued to each man, so they expect to see some fun and participate in a severe engagement before the day is over.

The following members of Company D are in camp: Captain F. G. Stewart; First Lieutenant, J. A. Buchanan; First Sergeant, Roy Agee; Sec. Sergeant, A. L. Cox; Sergeants, "Penny" McGeheey, A. R. Marker and C. B. Brockway; Corporals, M. C. Nelson, Benjie Caro, John Kernan, Allan Bingham, H. H. Boyd and I. W. Spencer, cooks, "Slim" Coffey and Hank Simmons; musician, Harvey Moore.

Privates: Theo Bond, Paul Bahrke, Clark Burge, Ashley Buchanan, A. L. Copeland, Percy Dawe, Mark Dunham, Otto Erickson, Earl Goble, Roy George, C. G. Garner, Earl Hill, Harold Hunt, Orin Hall, A. R. Hollenbeck, Delwin Jewett, Henry Kernan, Walter Miller, Lyle Marsters, Matt Micken, Bud McCoy, Dee McKay, C. A. Nelson, C. E. Nysrom, Ben Palm, Steve Pearson, Ed Rose, Chas Reese, Tom McKay and A. E. Street—47 in all. We have one of the largest companies in the encampment.

Our camp is pleasantly located and on the exact spot where we camped two years ago. We look forward to a very pleasant and profitable encampment.

(Special to Evening News.) HOBOKEN, Aug. 11.—Reticence on the part of the attending physicians on the wounded mayor of New York is causing friends to fear that the truth regarding Gaynor's true condition and his chances for recovery are being withheld. The surgeons will not say that Gaynor is out of danger, nor do they predict his ultimate recovery. The question of nourishment is worrying the doctors opposite solids of any sort, Gaynor insists that he is accustomed to eat heartily and if the present diet is continued he will become weakened. Altogether Mayor Gaynor's condition is favorable to recovery.
