AUTOMATIC SALARY BILL LOST.
 Buchanan Withdrew His Measure for Repairs.

SALEM, Or., Feb. 2.—House bill No. 58, presented by Buchanan, of Douglas, and automatically regulating the salaries of county officers, tried to ride the waves in the lower house yesterday afternoon, and several times approached perilously near the capsizing stage. Finally it appeared that even with the smooth and experienced hand of the Douglas county man at the tiller it could not survive, and Buchanan succeeded in getting it back to the salaries committee in time to prevent complete wreckage.

The bill places the counties into 19 classes, providing for salaries which range from $4,000 down to $700. Buchanan made the plea that too much time of the legislature is taken up with salary bills, and that if the people did not like those provided in the bills they had recourse to the referendum in their particular counties under the provisions of the bill.

Objections came from members from all sections of the state, most of them maintaining the salaries provided were too high. Buchanan saw that if the bill came to a vote it would be lost, and he moved to refer it back to the committee. He called a meeting of those interested last evening and tried to harmonize the opposing elements into views which accorded with his own. Numerous amendments will be made to the bill before it comes back for consideration on the floor.

GOOD ROADS LAWS.

Prisoners Will be Employed on Road Building.

SALEM, Or., Feb. 2.—Amended to place the custody of city and county prisoners in charge of the sheriff when they are worked on the roads, the fourth measure advanced by the Oregon Good Roads Association was passed by the senate yesterday afternoon.

Amendment of the bill to keep the prisoners with the sheriff had been expected. Two amendments to that effect were offered, one by Bowerman and the other by Von der Hellen. The latter was withdrawn in favor of the one framed by Bowerman. After an animated argument the amendment prevailed by a vote of 15 to 4. This vote was taken in committee of the whole and was not recorded. Nottingham was the only senator from Multnomah who voted to place the prisoners in control of the county court.

INTEREST MANIFEST.
 Crowds Assemble to Hear Evangelist At Amnory.

There was a rattling good song service at the amnory last night and on some of the older songs it was hard to tell which end of the house was the choir. Mr. Stover has deliberately started in to popularize "He Heeded Me," and the melody being remarkably tuneful, it is a good guess that it will be whistled on the streets in a few days. The evangelistic trio sang one of Mr. Law's own compositions, and all three almost out-drove themselves. The song is effective—a good one, and the trio made it all count.

A three minute scripture reading developed that the Bible was not an unknown book to many people. Rev. Burkhardt of the Presbyterian church made the opening prayer, and occupied a seat on the platform.

The preacher was wide-eyed and alert. His Texas drawl bore no suggestion of ineffectiveness but rather instigated a veiled fire. The attentive audience never flagged, was not much changed to. Law had all the stops out, both pedals wide open and the coupler on, besides the crowd all wanted to be awake when he made the high dive from the platform which seemed imminent almost any moment.

"Choose ye this day whom ye will serve, but for me and my house we will serve the Lord." This is the ultimatum, and decision that makes my blood tingle with admiration for old gray haired, battle-scarred veteran Joshua. It's red blood words. A man stands before a nation and without waiting for their decision declares, "Go one or all of you to other altars, I and my house will serve the Lord."

Joshua was boss of himself and boss of his house. He recognized that God expected him to be a ruler and guide to his household. There is no uncertain stobber in the bugle call of this old herald. He doesn't ask his daughters or sons or servants what they are going to do. He knows what they are going to do.

Folks there is a ring in the words that makes me glad. They come smiling over the graves of four thousand years and hit the bull's eye square in the middle that I want to holler "Halleluiah!"

Men of this stamp are scarce. In the twentieth century men say "Well, I'll do it if so and so will." On moral questions they are afraid to stand alone. On religious questions they say "I will if the rest will." Men will close their stores for gospel work if someone else will. The fact of the matter is, we are fooling with religion—taking hold of it with the tips of our fingers. When we grab it with hands and swing it up in the air, the devil will duck—so long as we poke at it with kid gloves. God, men, angels or devils look at our profession with derision.

God has put a premium on the man who will do right regardless of the rest of his social circle. The marked man in state, business and religion is that fellow who in crises of right and wrong does not sneak round to some livery barn, or into the back end of a store to find out where others are going to stand. He takes the Joshua note and says, "Do as you please, as for me, I will stand for the right," and it's this man who quietly takes a place in our admiration and ultimately rides to success.

Some men will say "I have got to make a living." "No you have not," yelled the preacher, uttering on the edge of the high platform, and poking rapid holes in the atmosphere. "You've got to make a living." It's a weak minded man who values his stomach more than his soul. It takes a man—all men, to live the Christian life and give you forget it. The more a man gives way to his passions the more he gets like a beast. I'd like to know where the fool idea gained credence that it takes manhood to ease, drink, gamble, lie and libertize—any old senseless thing in pants can do that. It takes manhood to live above them. The reason you live on a low level is because you have not nerve and decision of character to stand alone. I've run across men who wanted to be Dives on earth and Lazarus after death. But you can't work a shell game on God. As the tree falls so shall it lie," better watch where you fall, old man, because you'll lie there a long time.

Death beds are no place to arrange for your falling. Almost invariably the sputtering penitent, if he gets well, goes right on with his old life and if he didn't it's a cowardly piece of work to throw your rotten old carcass in God's face saying, "Here, Lord, I've squeezed all the service out of this for the Devil—you can have the rest", and then you think you make a leap into a white robe and crown.

If it were a man jouncing you he would throw the offensive remnant back in your direction and say, "Here, take your old body and go to hell with it." Law was good and warm, his hair stood up like "swells on a frosty forenoon," sweat rolled on his face and his high wire act on the edge of the platform kept nerves jinking as he rotated and tried to reach out to where the dead beat was in the audience.

His whole sermon was pointed and practical and delivered with pillar-driver force. The after service was specially solemn. There was marked solemnity in the audience and five persons made a definite choice of God.

Tonight is special service in honor of mother. Men will be carried back to boyhood on the wings of old songs mother sang and the meeting promises to be specially interesting to everybody.
