There is nothing before the legislature as important as the five good roads measure. They will place Oregon squarely in the procession of progressive states. They will inaugurate a policy that will give this state permanent highways. There is nothing more necessary for the solid growth of Oregon, remarks the Salem Statesman.

Please bear in mind that advertising never added one dollar to the value of any article advertised. Advertising merely tells the value, it does not create it. Goods must have merit in them to sell, and they must also have merit when sold to stay sold. A sale does not end with the making of it nowadays; it never ends as long as the man is using the article you sell.—Ex.

In a short address before the inmates of a "house of refuge" in an eastern city not long ago a minister dwelt upon the subject of "Lead Pencils and Boys." He drew parallel comparisons between the different kinds of pencils and boys, using a dozen or more different kinds, lengths and colors of pencils to describe the different kinds of boys. The chief points of emphasis were lead in a pencil must be of good material and the boys need some one to sharpen them to get good work from them; that the lead in a pencil must be of good material, so the boy must be built of good material to be a success; that the outside color of a pencil did not make it good, neither did the color of a boy, or the kind of clothes he wore.
