WIND-UP OF LEGISLATURE.

"Many Are Called"—But Few Will Return, Says Rusk.

Salem Statesman: Shortly after midnight the twenty-sixth legislative assembly adjourned sine die. In some respects this session of the legislature has been a remarkable one, distinguished for the large amount of money appropriated and the flood of bills of minor importance that consumed its time.

During the evening session the senate considered many bills of importance, including the good roads bills as they left the house.

The representatives, after passing resolutions for overtime pay for the various employees connected with the house, decided to improve the time in having a good time. For three hours a farcical discussion of the Simpson appointment bill was on the boards and the members had a merry time of it.

Many jests and jokes marked the closing hours of the session in the house. After the members had played as long as they wished and passed resolutions thanking everybody connected with the session, including the representatives of the press, the members grew more sober and made talks, telling of the friendships and attachments formed during the session.

Jerry Rusk thanked his fellow members for the courtesy they had shown him and explained that while he had accorded all members and all factions the same treatment.

"We have been freely criticized for some of our acts," declared the speaker. "The newspapers have raised a great hullabaloo about the amount of money that we have appropriated and some of the other things that we have done and it is probable that few of us will come back again to this hall."

Notwithstanding the indefinite postponement of the bill authorizing the county court of Douglas county to execute a deed conveying certain land, known as the fair grounds, to the Roseburg Park & Fair Association, by the legislature, County Judge Wonnacott this afternoon asserted that he believed the court has the power to execute such a deed under the laws of Oregon.
