ANOTHER PIONEER GONE.

Cyrus Hedden, age 91 years and 25 days, died of pneumonia, March 29th, at his home in Scottsburg, Oregon. He was born March 4, 1820, in Newark, N. J., where he lived until 25 years old, then went to Terre Haute, Ind. In 1850 he crossed the plains to California where he went into the mines. In '51 he came to Oregon, where he figures among the ablest of pioneers. Was one of the first into Coos and Curry counties and a survivor of the Indian fight at Battle Rock, now famous in the history of the county, also on Coquille River in September '51 when half their number was killed he tramped up the lonely beach, carrying and dragging his wounded friend and companion, Capt. L. L. Williams, thus he reached Scottsburg, where he opened a blacksmith shop and later became a successful merchant. He turned his mercantile business over to his son, John N., in 1877, who has been associated with him in business ever since he was 20 years old and who still keeps the firm name of C. Hedden.

In 1854 he was married to Margaret Sawyers, who preceded him to the Great Beyond on December, 20, 1890. Their four children are all deceased except their son John N., above mentioned.

He leaves to mourn his loss, one brother and two sisters, of Newark, N. J., and son John N., and seven grandchildren, besides a host of friends who have loved, honored and respected him.

He was laid to rest beside his wife in the Scottsburg cemetery, March 31, 1911. His mound was covered with beautiful floral offerings, which bore witness of that love that had "Budded on earth to blossom in Heaven." "Gone but not forgotten; he is with the pioneers above."

Grandpa, darling, you have left us,
 Left us, yes, for ever more,
 But we know you are with Jesus—
 On that bright and happy shore.

Though your gone, your not forgotten
 And when all our work is done
 We will meet you up in Heaven
 Walking with that Angel Throug.
 A FRIEND.
