A box containing six mammoth Crawford peaches, grown on the ranch of George Kruse, about 5 miles west of the city, was presented to this office today by Mr. Kruse, and the fruit has attracted a great deal of admiration from all who saw it in our show windows. These six peaches weigh just 4 1/2 pounds, the largest one measures 12 inches in circumference and the smallest one measures 10 1/2 inches, and they were grown on young trees. Peaches that weigh nearly a pound each are pretty good for a country, but few localities are able to produce them.

NEWSPAPER MAN.

Our eyes are thick for slumber and our brains are tired and stale; Nerves we have none to speak of, yet we never dare to fall. There are always cries for "copy", and they never cry in vain. For the press' need is cruel and racks not of our pain.

Through the endless summer evening when we should be with our wives We are endlessly recording all the tales of other lives. We recount the deeds of heroes; there are new ones every day. Or are reveling in scandal for—about a teamster's pay.

We greet the new-fledged statesman; self-important, green elate; We warn the politicians what to do to save the state; We clink the glasses with good fellows; yet we've got to keep our head.

For the scandals of the living and the virtues of the dead.

There are some that seem to envy the positions that we hold. To think that our typewriters are like pens of beaten gold; tho' our homes we seldom see, And the smiles of wife and children are not to such as we.

But I guess we'll keep on going; take assignments; do the work; We may loaf or drink or gamble, but our tasks we may not shirk; For it's in our blood—the fever—and we die off one by one— But the press goes on forever, for its work is never done.

—Petoskey Daily Reporter.
