your responsibility. We each have a mission in life—if we strive to do the best there is in us, God will care for the rest.

No written tablet in the hall of fame, Will garland our deeds with an empty name,
But deeds for God and deeds for men Are written in heaven and will live again.

We are builders whatever we do
Builders of character, staunch and true,
Builders of home and native land,
And reaching far to every strand.

With busy hands the work is done,
With busy feet the race is won;
With cheerful lips the word is said
In noble lives, our mission sped.

Go find your task and do it well,
And of the praise, let other tell;
Such is the work for you and me,
Builders for time and eternity.
Again I bid you welcome.

Mrs. Norris, of Oregon City, on behalf of the federation, spoke of the last meeting at The Dalles, saying that when adjournment came it was not known just where the 1911 meeting would be held, but later all members were delighted when Roseburg's insistent invitation was accepted, particularly since club life in this city was fully imbued with the spirit of its responsibilities, and, too, the proverbial hospitality of the queen city of the Umpqua was so well known. Many had never visited the Southern Oregon city, but all had heard of the beauty of its surroundings, the luscious fruits, beautiful flowers, the ideal climate and the progressive spirit of its people, therefore were overjoyed when the announcement was received that Roseburg was chosen as convention city for 1911. More than all that Mrs. Norris said that even the men of Roseburg were of good repute, as since she had arrived at least one man had been seen to actually help his wife with the housework, and she herself had fallen in love with Roseburg men—and women, too. Speaking of the efforts of the federation to acquire a voice in the general government the speaker alluded to work that is being done and that men would soon say to women: "Well done, good and faithful servants, enter into the higher privileges we have prepared for you." A round of applause from every part of the house gave evidence of great appreciation of these remarks.

Mrs. Evans then introduced, in a pertinent way, that talented woman and tireless worker in the cause of equal rights for women, the very first in the movement for women's clubs in Oregon, Mrs. Abigail Scott Duniway. As the pioneer lady came forward she was greeted with a continued applause—an ovation in itself. Mrs. Duniway spoke briefly of her life work in Oregon, having crossed the plains in the long ago, of her first work in behalf of equal rights in Oregon, and described how she landed in Roseburg more than 35 years ago to start the work in this city which has since spread to all parts of the great Pacific coast. Her graphic story of the arrival here, not knowing whether the modest hotel of the frontier town would give her accommodation on account of the prejudice existing against women's rights, was listened to with intense interest by every one in the edifice. But notwithstanding all opposition she had gathered the pioneer women together—those who were who had grasped the great plains in company with their husbands—and there the work was thoroughly organized today was begun. Public sentiment was against any sort of women's clubs, but individually and through her publications she had maintained equal rights and privileges. In Washington Territory suffrage was finally adopted, only to be overturned in a couple of years by enemies of the movement. With Mrs. Stewart, of Olympia, the speaker said that she had met and together they counseled concerning club life and finally organization was effected, but of equal rights was ever made in the sessions. In fact the first few years sodities and religion were not discussed in the club meetings. Now, however, the movement that had its beginning in Roseburg so long ago finds thousands of supporters who favor equal rights to the women of Oregon, while Colorado, Wyoming, Idaho, Washington, Utah and last of all California have recognized that the wives and mothers have a place by the side of their husbands and sons and brothers in the work of government and for the uplifting of the race. Mrs. Duniway stated that next Sunday she would pass the seventy-seventh mile stone in life's journey, and that she had lived to see the fulfillment of her hopes, predicting that in 1912 the men of Oregon would follow their sister states and give a glorious verdict for equal rights to the women of the states, leading them in the march of progress and enlightenment.

Following Mrs. Duniway's intense and interesting speech officers of the federated clubs submitted reports of work accomplished in the past year, all of which were promptly accepted and filed.

Opportunity was then given for all delegates to register, and following is a list of those in attendance, five of whom are officers, nine representing standing committees, and showing a voting body of sixty-eight present at this opening session.

Before adjournment for lunch it was announced that the Roseburg ladies had prepared a menu for everybody, and all were invited to repair to the commodious dining rooms in the basement of the church, where tables laden with good things were in waiting. This delightful part of the session was not down on the official program, but Roseburg women are never lacking in surprises for guests on any and all occasions, and those who know them best would have wondered that some timely affair was sure to be sprung at just the right moment, and so it proved. The long tables in the basement were loaded with substantial good things and all sorts of seasonable Umpqua Valley fruits, which the hundred or more guests partook of with evident relish after the arduous work of the morning session.

Afternoon.

At 1:30 the afternoon session convened, the first number being a musical selection by Mrs. C. H. Arundel, which was delightfully rendered and appreciatively received by the audience. Miss Helen Kennedy, of the state library commission, made an interesting talk on the subject of "Buying Books for the Home," followed by a vocal solo, "Harmony," by Miss Mildred Wilson. This beautiful number was followed by an animated discussion of "Interior Decorations and Household Furnishings," by Mrs. Laura Baldwin-Doolittle, who illustrated her talk with demonstrations in harmony and color schemes which were very instructive. "Civic Art," by Mrs. Alice Welster, was an excellent paper, full of good suggestions for not only civic life, but for the individual home-builder.

The convention adjourned shortly after 2 o'clock sufficiently long to be photographed by Clark. The picture was taken in the street just north of the church.

Mrs. Zurecher announced that on Thursday evening the ladies of the Eastern Star would entertain the delegates, and tonight at the commercial club rooms there will be a concert and reception to the officers and delegates of the convention by the Ladies United Club of Roseburg. The program for tonight will be as follows:
